Japanese scientists ask Carter for assurances that U.S. will not send nuclear weapons there

TOKYO (AP) — A group of Japanese scientists and legal experts today asked President Carter for assurances that the American military will not send nuclear weapons to Japan. The U.S. Air Force has a base on the island of Okinawa.

Sixteen nuclear scientists and jurists sent a questionnaire to Carter, asking: "Can you pledge not to bring nuclear weapons into Japan under any circumstances?"

Claiming atomic weapons are present in nearby South Korea, the questionnaire also asked Carter, "What is your view on such deployment?" and said: "We are concerned about the fact that part of the 5th Air Force, the mainstay of the American Air Force presence in South Korea, is deployed on Okinawa, its headquarters located in Japan."

The Japanese asked for written answers to the questionnaire, which they said was prompted by a Carter interview in an American magazine.

They said Carter told U.S. News and World Report: "... in areas where nuclear weapons are deployed in the western Pacific and also in Europe and to defend our homeland, their very deployment implies a possibility of their use, if necessary."

The Japanese said 85 copies of the questionnaire were sent to all Carter cabinet members, U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield and strategic, scientific and peace institutes of the world.

Many Japanese have a revulsion toward nuclear weaponry, stemming from the American A-bomb drops on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945.

In another nuclear development, a high Foreign Ministry official said today that Japan still hopes to start running its fast breeder reactor in July as scheduled, despite reports from American sources that U.S. permission for trial operation will not be forthcoming this month.

"We hope very much to start operation as scheduled, and I believe the United States fully understands our position," said Kensukue Yanagiya, director of the ministry's information office.

Under a bilateral treaty, Japan needs U.S. agreement to run the fast breeder reactor, which produces more nuclear fuel than it consumes. The United States — Japan's sole uranium supplier — fears plutonium created by the $170 million Tokai Mura reactor might be used for nuclear weapons.

Two drown in valley swim pool accidents

A 3-year-old child and a 30-year-old woman drowned in backyard swimming pool accidents in San Dimas and Pomona, authorities said today.

The 3-year-old, Mia Frendel, of West Covina, was being cared for at the home of her grandmother at 1717 Via Palomares in San Dimas. The woman, Frances Carol Vincent, of Pomona, was found dead in a pool at 661 E. McKinley Ave. Police said she had been a guest at a Fourth of July party there, and had not been seen since 3 a.m. July 5.

The little girl's grandmother, Joel Christenson, 48, told sheriff's deputies that Mia was riding a tricycle on the patio when she left her "for a moment." When she returned, Mrs. Christenson said, she found the child at the bottom of the pool in about 3 & 1/2 feet of water. She jumped in and pulled the victim from the water. Attempts at artificial respiration failed and the victim was pronounced dead shortly after noon at San Dimas Community Hospital where she had been taken by sheriff's radio car.

Frances Vincent was found at the bottom of the pool in Pomona by men who were cleaning around it. One of the men, William F. Crawford, 23, said the victim was at the bottom of the deep end.

The body, clad in a red bikini, was pulled from the pool by Pomona Fireman Gil Aguilero. A coroner's official later said she had been dead for some time and rigor mortis had developed. An autopsy was ordered.

The victim had no known relatives in Pomona. Her mother resides in Seattle, Wash., according to police.

66 others injured; arson suspected

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Fire swept through a three-story cellblock at the federal medium security prison here early today, killing five persons and injuring about 66.

Authorities said they believed the five dead were prisoners.

Danbury police Sgt. Robert Lovell said an investigation by fire department and prison officials indicated that the fire was deliberately set, but he would not elaborate. Associate Warden Billy Davis refused to comment on the cause.

Inmates who lived in the burned-out dormitory said the blaze was caused by an electrical problem in a dormitory washroom. However, Danbury Fire Marshal Fred Tomiano ruled out faulty wiring as the cause of the blaze.

Several inmates said they were trapped inside the burning room for up to 30 minutes because the doors were locked.

"We had to feel for the bodies, that's how thick the smoke was," said inmate Darnell Kinnard of Washington, D.C.

Hospital authorities said the dead were presumed to be inmates because of the clothing they were wearing. Positive identification of the victims was awaiting fingerprint comparisons.

The fire broke out about 1:30 a.m. and was brought under control at 2:50 a.m. It came less than two weeks after a fire in the Maury County Jail in Columbia, Tenn. Cyanide-laced smoke from the plastic padding used in one of the cells killed 42 persons in that blaze. A 16-year-old runaway has been charged with arson.

The Danbury prison can accommodate 750 prisoners. There were about 80 inmates in the cellblock where the fire broke out.

Lovell said when the first fire trucks arrived they had trouble reaching the fire because they couldn't get through the gates.

"If the inmates had stood around and watched, there would have been 72 dead men," prisoner Richard Evans said.

Nation swelters as temperatures climb into 100s

By The Associated Press

Much of America sweltered Wednesday and wondered whether the below-zero weather of last winter was really so bad after all as temperatures soared into the 90s and 100s. Not much relief is in sight.

In Washington, D.C., temperatures have been over 90 for the past 10 days and hit 100 for the first time in eight years.

Elsewhere, it reached 100 in Atlanta, 105 in Las Vegas, 108 in Phoenix, Ariz.; 105 in Richmond, Va.; 100 in Omaha, Neb.; 103 in Des Moines, Iowa; and 100 in Dallas-Ft. Worth.

Seventeen tornadoes were reported Wednesday, nine in Wisconsin and six in Iowa.

2 die in crash of restored airplane

SANTA ANA (AP) — Two commercial pilots were killed when their World War II biplane crashed shortly after it took off on its first flight after it was reconditioned.

The crash occurred Wednesday afternoon when the single-engine Stearman lost power and crashed into a vacant field near the Orange County Airport, officials said.

Killed were William Fred Reiner, 32, a co-pilot for Air California, and John Griffin, 34, an Air California pilot. Both were from Mission Viejo.

Weather

Continued warm and smoggy through Friday. High both days 91, low tonight 55. The high Wednesday was 90 and the overnight low was 53. Friday's sunrise 5:46, sunset 8:05.

President tries to ease apprehensions of Jewish leaders about foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is calling for a Middle East peace settlement to include full diplomatic relations between Israel and the Arab states as the administration prepares for talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

The President, meeting with 53 American Jewish leaders in a White House session on Wednesday, told them he believes there still is a chance for a lasting Middle East peace settlement, possibly by late this year.

Carter is due to meet with Begin in Washington later this month.

Meanwhile, the President was reported determined to decide personally whether to recommend production of a proposed new neutron bomb. Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter expects to make a decision shortly after he has a chance to see the results of studies on the new weapon.

The studies are expected to reach the President about Aug. 15, Powell said.

Carter met with the American Jewish leaders in an apparent attempt to ease their apprehensions about U.S. foreign policy in the Middle East.

He opened the session by declaring that the cornerstone of his Middle East policy is to win permanent peace and the security of Israel.

"This will be an unswerving purpose of all in this administration," he said. "I know all of you here share this hope, which is not beyond the bounds of reality in the next number of months."

Carter did not mention possible territorial compromises that Israel would have to accept in return for any lasting peace agreement.

Chinese pilot lands fighter in Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A squadron commander in the Chinese Communist air force flew his MIG19 jet fighter to Taiwan today and asked for political asylum, a spokesman for the Nationalist Chinese Defense Ministry announced.

The defector, 41-year-old Fan Yuan-yen, was quoted by the spokesman as saying there "are no human rights at all on the mainland" and broadcasts about people enjoying such rights in Taiwan reinforced his decision to defect. Informed sources said he would be rewarded with about $700,000 worth of gold.

Fan's plane is no prize, since it has been outdated by the MIG21 and MIG25. But military sources said he brought documents concerning Chinese coastal military installations and other defense information.

People in Taiwan welcomed news of Fan's defection. Some said they considered it ironic in light of U.S. President Carter's decision to seek the normalization of relations with Communist China.

The Defense Ministry spokesman said Fan took off from the Chintsian military air field in Fukien Province, crossed the Formosa Strait and landed at Tainan, in southwest Taiwan. Sources said Fan was a squadron commander of the Communist Chinese 1st reconnaissance wing.

He told officers there that life on the mainland was "so suffering" that he had "no choice but to flee to Taiwan," the spokesman reported.

Fan was the third Chinese air force pilot known to have defected to Taiwan.

Credit cold weather for crime rate drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's crime rate dropped 9 per cent in the first three months of this year over 1976, the largest quarterly reduction in the 19 years the FBI has issued crime reports, the agency said today.

The report listed a bitterly cold winter and heavy snow as possible reasons for the decrease.

Although there were reductions in five of the seven major crime categories, the number of rapes increased 5 per cent and aggravated assaults were up 1 per cent, the FBI said in its Uniform Crime Reports.

The statistics are based on the number of crimes reported to nearly 9,000 state and local law enforcement agencies. Besides rape and assault, the report covers murder, robbery, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft.

The sharpest decline was for larceny, 11 per cent. The report showed an 8 per cent decrease for robbery, 7 per cent for burglary, 5 per cent for murder and 4 per cent for motor vehicle theft.

The statistics showed an over-all decrease in the crime rate in cities, suburbs and rural areas alike, although the decline was slightly less in rural areas.

Geographically, the reduction ranged from 16 per cent in north-central states to 3 per cent in the West.

The new report listed actual crime figures, but no percentages.

It's 7-7-77

Good day for numerologists

NEW YORK (AP) — Today, July 7, is 7-7-77. If you put store in numbers, and share the belief that seven is a lucky one, you might think this is your lucky day.

But maybe you'd better think twice.

As reported in the New York Times of July 8, 1877, here are some of the things that happened on the last 7-7-77 — 100 years ago:

—More than 700 unlicensed dogs were drowned by the New York City dog pound, as owners of lost dogs scurried about trying to find their pets. "There was more excitement at the pound yesterday than at any time since its opening," the Times said.

—The German bark Auguste arrived in London "with her bulwarks and stanchions broken, her rigging carried away, and otherwise damaged, having been in collision."

—Otis Hodge's machine shop and foundry at North Adams, N.Y., was destroyed by fire, at a loss of $20,000. He had $8,000 insurance.

—Capt. Joseph Griffith, a Civil War veteran who had helped to survey the northern lakes, died suddenly in Iowa City, Iowa. "He was as well as usual at breakfast, and died at noon of apoplexy," the Times said.

—A horse named Idalia stepped up to the starting post at Monmouth Park, N.J., a favorite because she had already bested her competition, Zoo Zoo. But Idalia became uncontrollable, tried to bolt and lost the race before it started. "A more sorrowful looking set of men than Idalia's backers were never seen on a race course," the Times commented.

—Austin Spencer, a 78-year-old veteran of the War of 1812 who lived with two daughters and a wife in her 80s, had seen nothing wrong with making a little whisky at his home at 208 West 36th St. On July 7, 1877, he learned better. He was arrested on a charge of running an illicit still.

—Two deputy sheriffs showed up at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Saviour at Madison Avenue and 25th Street to confiscate ornaments, the organ, furniture and the like on behalf of the Rev. Dr. Abraham Carter, the pastor, who said he had not been paid for some time. The church also couldn't open the next day, Sunday, for services. On 7-7-77, the deputies had taken the keys.

—It was a lucky day for Philip Donohue of Elizabeth, who spent six hours buried in a collapsed well the night before but was rescued at just about midnight, as July 7 started.

—But it was the opposite kind of luck for a man named Daniel O'Leary, who chose 7-7-77 as the day on which he would walk 520 miles in six days would meet the moment of truth. He had been walking for five days already and covered 74½ miles on 7-7-77, but it wasn't enough. Just after midnight, he quit — 48½ miles short.

New homes must be cozier

SACRAMENTO (AP) — New California homes will have to meet energy-saving standards that are the most far-reaching in the world starting next year, a state energy official says.

First, however, the new standards adopted this spring by the state Energy Commission must survive builder-backed lawsuits pending in Marin and Los Angeles counties.

Ronald Doctor, a commission member who headed the committee that created the standards, said: "Taken together, there's nothing anywhere like we've done in California. Even if President Carter's actions match his words, the federal government is at least 18 months behind us."

One standard calls for double-paned glass for new homes mainly in Northern California after Jan. 1, 1979. Next March, other regulations dealing with window space, wall insulation, electric wall heaters and swimming pool heaters take effect.

The regulations cover apartments, motels and hotels as well as single-family residences.

Andy Sebhlok, executive director of Building Codes Action (BCA) in Berkeley, has filed suit in Marin County Superior Court attempting to block the regulations as "arbitrary and capricious."

BCA is a non-profit group financed by contractors.

Another suit has been filed in Los Angeles by the Masonry Institute of America.

Doctor said a home built to extreme standards, including double-paned glass, would cost $400 to $600 more, but he said the extra cost will be paid off quickly in energy savings.

Only a small fraction of the 200,000 new homes built annually in California would have to meet all the standards, because most Californians live in relatively mild climates, he said.

Doctor said these standards "will save consumers $316 million over the next 10 years."

By 1995, said Doctor, they are expected to save consumers $3.8 billion and 127 billion kilowatt hours of electricity. He said they were conservative estimates based on figures developed by the commission staff and independent studies ordered by the commission.

Sebhlok said in an interview that the commission "lacks data" to support its findings and the regulations "are neither cost-effective nor a help to the consumer."

He said Doctor was "overzealous" as a conservationist and the standards were developed in a "scientific vacuum. It's all their own work. There's not one competent study to support any their work."

Doctor, a nuclear physicist, rejected Sebhlok's allegations as "absolute nonsense. Sebhlok knows better. He has a propensity to make unwarranted, unsubstantiated claims."

Link Hollywood murder to trash bag murder case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police say the murder of a Hollywood man last year may be linked to the 28 "trash bag" slayings being investigated in five counties.

The possible connection surfaced Wednesday at a meeting between police and sheriff's officials from Riverside, Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and Imperial counties.

Officials in the five counties are comparing notes on the deaths, which span 10 years, by checking files and looking for similar backgrounds of victims and causes of death. Many of the victims were dismembered, stuffed into plastic trash bags and left next to well-traveled highways.

Patrick Kearney, 37, and David Hill, 34, turned themselves into Riverside deputies last week in connection with two of the deaths. They reportedly are working voluntarily with officers to solve the other 26.

Los Angeles homicide detective John St. John said that John Woods, 23, was found shot to death June 20, 1976 in his apartment.

St. John said several other unsolved cases in the Los Angeles area are similar to the "trash bag" killings, but no concrete evidence has linked them to the two men in custody.

Kearney and Hill were arraigned in Riverside Municipal Court Tuesday on charges of murdering Arturo Marquez, 24, of Oxnard, and John Lamay, 17, of El Segundo. The dismembered bodies of both victims were discovered last March.

Kearney and Hill are being held in a Riverside jail on $500,000 bail each. A plea hearing is scheduled for July 15.

Rule kidnap hearings open

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pretrial hearings for three young men accused of kidnaping 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver must be open to press and public, the California Supreme Court has ruled.

The tribunal Wednesday denied a petition which sought to keep the hearings closed. It also turned down a change of venue request by one of the trio.

The next court day in the case will be Monday for what is expected to be the beginning of four weeks of hearings on which evidence will be allowed in court, said Stan Collis, adminstrator for Alameda County Superior Court.

Richard Schoenfeld, 23, his brother, James, 25, both of Atherton, and Frederick N. Woods, 25, of nearby Woodside are charged with 27 counts of kidnaping and 18 counts of robbery stemming from the July 1976 hijacking.

Richard Schoenfeld and Woods had asked hearings on evidence and other material be closed. They argued that they could not get a fair trial if the press and public were not barred.

The three men are accused of commandeering the bus at gunpoint and then took their captives by van to a rock quarry east of Oakland where they were locked into a buried moving van.

The victims escaped after 18 hours in the makeshift cell by digging their way out.

Woods also sought a change of venue from Alameda County.

Bay area newspaper bargaining

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A strick blackout was imposed today on details of bargaining between unions and major San Francisco Bay Area newspapers after a marathon 19-hour negotiating session.

Bill Sabatino of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said he imposed the blackout when the talks recessed at 5 a.m. "because of the delicacy of the complex situation." Talks will continue this afternoon, he said.

Affected are approximately 6,500 employes of the San Francisco Chronicle, San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co., Oakland Tribune and San Jose Mercury-News.

A strike deadline of 12:01 a.m. next Thursday has been set by the San Francisco newspaper workers.

Hairy unemployment case

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A man who was fired for wearing a beard shouldn't be denied unemployment benefits unless his beard hurt his employer's business, a state board has ruled.

In a precedent-setting decision, the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board said Wednesday it was granting jobless benefits to a Los Angeles hotel maintenance engineer who had been fired for refusing to shave his beard.

The board said it wasn't denying the hotel's right to fire the engineer, Abraham Thaw of Granada Hills. But it said court decisions have granted constitutional protection for growing a beard in some circumstances.

Thaw, who had worked for the Los Angeles Hilton Hotel for seven years, was fired last Sept. 1.

He had been wearing a beard for two years, and was fired under newly instituted grooming rules, the board said. It said there was no evidence the beard had hurt the hotel's business.

The majority opinion by three of the board's five members said Thaw had not been fired for misconduct and was entitled to jobless benefits.

In a statement summarizing the opinion, the board said the majority found that:

"The claimant was discharged for reasons other than misconduct when there was no showing that requiring the claimant to shave off his beard would either enhance the employer's business or affect the claimant's ability to carry out his responsibilities as a maintenance engineer."

Busing: trustees vow appeal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two school board members who strongly oppose mandatory busing vow to appeal a court ruling rejecting the board's integration proposal as "wholly inadequate."

"It's incredible that he (Superior Court Judge Paul Egly) would call it constitutionally suspect," said Bobbi Fiedler, the San Fernando Valley housewife who last month defeated longtime school board member Robert Docter, an advocate of extensive integration. "I will do everything within my power to urge other members of the board to appeal this decision."

Board member Richard Ferraro, who has opposed attempts to desegregate the nation's second largest school district, accused the judge of being unrealistic.

"Wherever forced busing has been tried it's been a failure, and the judge refuses to look at that," Ferraro contended.

The bitter reaction came only hours after Egly ruled.

DROUGHT EFFECTS

This aerial view of Folsom Lake Marina at Brown's Ravine east of Sacramento shows seriousness of 2-year drought. Floating docks (lower right) lie on dry ground several yards from shore. Lake normally holds 866,000 acre feet and now is down to 240,300 acre feet.

Jurists-County differ on health

The Los Angeles County Grand Jury apparently doesn't feel the same way as the Board of Supervisors about the county's sprawling Department of Health Services.

The supervisors claim the department has become large and unwieldy to the point that it is unable to function efficiently.

But the Grand Jury feels it would be "unwise to tinker" with the various health subdivisions "at a time when the board is demanding billing procedure accountability and the application of modern business techniques."

Anne S. Murphy, chairman of the grand jury's health and hospital committee, said her group studied the workings of the health department for the past year and has come to the conclusion that the department could do a better job of correcting its own shortcomings than outside sources or splits.

The health department lost more than $12 million in Medi-Cal reimbursements during 1976 because it allegedly filed claims with the state improperly.

Furthermore, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn charged this week that the county's hospital system has failed to bill or collect more than $15 million from former patients.

The supervisors contend that the department, which now has charge not only of health services but also the hospitals, drug and alcoholic programs, nursing and mental health centers, has become too large to operate.

They have instructed Chief Administrative Officer Harry L. Hufford to conduct a comprehensive study of the operation of the department with an eye toward breaking it up into smaller operating units.

That report is due Sept. 1.

Urge children's vaccinations

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Pomona health officials are urging parents to get the needed immunizations for their children at evening health center clinics this summer.

"Since the schools will be taking a get-tough attitude requiring that students receive immunizations before entering school in September, these summer clinics will offer the opportunity to meet that requirement," said Dr. Annabel J. Teberg, medical director of the San Gabriel Valley Health Services Region.

"If parents take advantage of the clinics prior to the start of school, they should not have to wait in long lines, such as occurred during the recent measles crisis," said Dr. Teberg.

The Pomona Health Center, 750 S. Park Ave., will conduct clinics on Wednesday and on Aug. 10 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Immunizations against diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, measles, polio and rubella will be offered.

Protection against these diseases also is available at daytime clinics at Pomona Health Center. Regular clinics are held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 9 a.m. and on Mondays through Fridays from 3 to 4 p.m.

In addition, tuberculin skin tests are given on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 8 to 9 a.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m. Tuberculin skin tests are not given at the evening clinics.

A review of immunizations records will be made to determine what shots are needed by children and adults.

Children from infants to age 18 may receive all immunizations as recommended by the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services.

Adults should get a tetanus-diphtheria booster shot every 10 years.

Children must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian when they visit a clinic. Previous immunization records should be brought along.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 623-6811, ext. 528.

Neighborhood rape suspect nabbed

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Police say they're ecstatic about the arrest of a suspect charged with nine neighborhood rapes, but the trauma lingers for women in suburban Villa Ana.

"I know wives who kiss their husbands good-bye, then sit waiting at the kitchen table with a gun in their hand until it's time to wake the children for school," Debbie Gibson, a neighborhood leader, said in an interview.

"We're all relieved, but we're not going to let down our guard."

Jefferson County police announced Wednesday that Ron Hood, a 26-year-old chiropractor, had been charged with 36 counts in connection with the assaults, which took place within one year.

Hood is being held in lieu of $495,000 cash bail.

He has been charged with nine counts of rape, 11 counts of burglary, five counts of sodomy, one count of first-degree assault, eight counts of second-degree assault, one count of sexual abuse and one count of auto theft.

"We're ecstatic over this arrest," said police spokesman Bob Yates. "It's been the No. 1 priority for the police department for the last few months."

All the victims were housewives with children. Most of the assaults occurred in the early morning hours when the victims' husbands were away from home. In each case, the assailant threatened to harm the victim's children unless she submitted.

Since the first assault was reported on July 5, 1976, residents of Villa Ana, where five of the nine rapes occurred, have been "living in pure fear," said Mrs. Gibson, a mother of three. The other four rapes occurred within two miles of Villa Ana, a subdivision of Valley Station, which is southwest of Louisville.

"You're afraid to just go across the street to a neighbor without locking your door," said Mrs. Gibson. "I think since it all started everyone in the neighborhood has gone out and gotten a gun and a lot of people have gotten dogs."

Mrs. Gibson, who four months ago demanded greater protection at a meeting of Jefferson County Fiscal Court, said that despite the arrest, she will continue to press for the formation of a neighborhood association.

"We're not going to have guards, but we'll try to make it a more secure neighborhood with better street lighting and block captains and a system of calling your neighbors if you think something is wrong.

"People have been afraid to come to Villa Ana," she said. "We want to let people know they have nothing to be afraid of."

Yates said the arrest followed a tip from one of Hood's alleged victims, who said the man told her he would be back in about a week.

Two policemen watched the woman's house for several nights and saw a man approach early Wednesday morning. The officers lost the suspect in a foot race, but subsequently located his car near the woman's home and arrested him later in the day, Yates said.

U.S. tests neutron bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has conducted underground tests in Nevada with the neutron bomb, a government spokesman said today.

"It's a matter of procedure that weapons are tested before production," said a spokesman for the Energy Research and Development Administration.

The neutron bomb, which is designed to kill people with massive doses of radiation while leaving most buildings intact, is designed as a warhead for the Lance missile, which now carries conventional nuclear warheads.

The Pentagon is seeking funds to put the neutron bomb into production.

The ERDA spokesman said the neutron bomb, known as the enhanced radiation warhead, "is under development now. Nuclear weapons are tested in the development stage before they go into production."

He declined to say when testing began, how often the weapon has been tested or the results. He said the tests have been conducted under treaties requiring that nuclear tests be conducted underground and that no radiation escape.

President Carter has not made a decision on whether to produce the neutron bomb. But he has asked Congress to approve production funds to provide him with flexibility in reaching a decision.

The Pentagon noted recently in a statement that "in the case of the improved Lance warhead (neutron bomb) versus the present warhead, we have succeeded in reducing the area exposed to fire(thermal radiation), fallout and the total of blast by a factor of more than 10."

The Pentagon added that "by confining these effects to small areas, the military effectiveness is maintained, while minimizing the unwarranted hazard to nearby populations, to U.S. and allied forces, and greatly reducing the destruction around the immediate target area."

Mauritania ambassador shot in Paris assassination try

PARIS (AP) — A gunman shot the Mauritanian ambassador to France today, but officials at the American Hospital said he was out of danger. He was the third ambassador shot in Paris in the past two years.

The attempt on Ambassador Ahmed Ghanahalla, 36, apparently was the work of the Polisario Front, which is fighting a guerrilla war in northwest Africa for the independence of the former Spanish Sahara from Mauritania and Morocco.

A woman telephoned Agence France Presse, the French news agency, and said the Mohamed el Wali Sayed International Brigade was responsible for the attack. Mohamed el Wali Sayed was the secretary-general of the Polisario Front who was killed in an attack on Nouakchott, the capital of Mauritania, in June 1976.

Ghanahalla was shot this morning just after he had gotten into his chauffeur-driven car near his home in the fashionable 16th District. Witnesses said two men about 25 years old approached the parked car from behind and one of them fired six shots through the rear window.

"They shot the ambassador! They shot the ambassador!" the chauffeur yelled and drove the car into a gas station about 50 yards away.

An attendant there said the ambassador "had two holes in his right jaw, and blood was flowing onto his gray suit."

"I told the chauffeur to take him to the Ambroise-Pare Hospital," the filling station man continued, "but the ambassador said, 'No, I want to go to the American Hospital in Neuilly.'"

The two attackers fled into adjacent streets and escaped. Witnesses said one carried a satchel under his arm and wore a brown coat. They said the other was wearing blue jeans.

Ghanahalla, who had represented his government in Paris for about 15 months, was taken to the emergency room at the American Hospital. An hour later a spokesman for the hospital said he was out of danger and conscious. Another source said he had been shot in the head and the legs.

The Spanish Sahara was partitioned and annexed by neighboring Morocco and Mauritania, after Spain relinquished the territory last year. Algeria, which adjoins a short stretch of the territory's northeast frontier, opposed the takeover and supports the Polisario Front.

Polisario guerrillas made a mortar attack Sunday night on Nouakchott and wounded three soldiers.

The Turkish ambassador to France and his chauffeur were killed in Paris by the Armenian Liberation Army on Oct. 24, 1975, and the Bolivian ambassador was killed on May 11, 1976, by gunmen who said they were avenging Latin American revolutionary Che Guevara.

In addition, the Spanish deputy military attache was shot in October 1975, with the same gun that killed the Bolivian ambassador. The Uruguayan military attache was killed on Dec. 19, 1974, by Tupamaros guerrillas from Uruguay, and an Iranian attache was wounded by gunmen opposed to the shah of Iran.

Dorsett accused in bar row

DALLAS (AP) — A bartender and barmaid at a Dallas disco have cited Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys' heralded running back, for unnecessary roughness.

Dorsett faces two charges of simple assault stemming from an altercation at the night spot early last Thursday. He could be fined up to $200 on each count if convicted of the misdemeanor.

The complaints, filed in Municipal Court, allege Dorsett punched the bartender and threw a whisky glass that cut the barmaid. He was not arrested, a Dallas police spokesman said, but will have to answer a summons.

Dorsett, who signed a Cowboy contract worth a reported $1.2 million, said the altercation resulted from a misunderstanding over whether he had paid for his drinks.

He said a bartender asked if he had paid. "And he asked in a way I didn't appreciate," said Dorsett.

The bartender insisted he move from the bar, Dorsett said, but Dorsett refused to move until he had finished his drink.

"He started coming at me. I was just protecting myself," said Dorsett. "I know this: if I hadn't been Tony Dorsett, nothing would have been made of it. I don't know if the bartender knew at the time when he started it who I was, but he found out later."

"Dorsett just reached across the bar and punched me," said the bartender, Sammie Emerick, 26.

Nitrogen caused leak in pipeline

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Mishandling of frigid liquid nitrogen apparently caused the break in an L-shaped section of pipe that has forced a two-day shutdown of the trans-Alaska pipeline, say two industry sources.

Repair work on the pipe was expected to be completed in time for the oil flow to resume today. On that schedule, oil movement would still be a half day ahead of the timetable set by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

Tax break for middle incomes being urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families with an annual income of less than $25,000 would get a tax break under legislation being proposed by the Carter administration.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told a group of graduate students Wednesday that the administration wants to provide tax relief for middle and lower income people. He also said there may be a new proposal for tax payments for poor Americans, commonly referred to as a negative income tax.

The tax break for families earning less than $25,000 a year will be sent to Congress as part of the administration's tax reform program, Blumenthal said. He said it was unlikely the program would be enacted and take effect for at least a year.

Although Blumenthal specifically mentioned families with incomes ranging from $15,000 to $25,000 as deserving of tax relief, he didn't specify how such relief would be granted.

Driver hurt in car crash

A 23-year-old Chula Vista man was in guarded condition this morning at Ontario Community Hospital with injuries suffered in a traffic accident at Benson and Francis avenues in Ontario Wednesday evening.

The driver, Randy Kenneth Cavin, was admitted to the Ontario hospital after his small sports car, eastbound on Francis Avenue, struck another vehicle driven by Russell Lee Keith, 46, of 2003 S. Benson Ave., Ontario. Keith was not injured in the 7:13 p.m. accident.

Ontario police said it appeared that the sports car ran a stop sign striking the other vehicle broad-side. The accident is under investigation.

Three firemen injured fighting Montclair fire

Three firemen were injured Wednesday afternoon battling a fire at 4371 Los Alamitos St., Montclair that destroyed the roof and attic of a home causing an estimated $20,000 damage to the structure and its contents.

The owner of the home, Louis Williams, his wife and their four children managed to escape the blazing house before firemen arrived about 3:45 p.m. Firemen fought the blaze for 10 minutes before bringing it under control.

Fire Inspector Jim Brown said this morning that three firemen were injured in the fire, but only one, Dave Calloway, would be off work for several weeks with back injuries.

Brown said that the fire was apparently caused by fireworks set off by children playing on the street earlier. Several youths were being questioned about the fire.

Pain reliever claims a fallacy?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Adminstration today was urged to stop manufacturers of aspirin-based pain relievers from claiming that the drugs provide relief for symptoms of arthritis and rheumatism.

A federal advisory panel also recommended that products containing acetaminophen, the chief aspirin substitute, carry labels warning that excessive doses can cause liver damage.

The recomendations to the FDA followed the scientific panel's four-year study of over-the-counter analgesic pain relievers and fever reducers.

The panel said that aspirin and acetaminophen, the two most commonly used nonprescription pain relievers, are safe and effective but should have tougher warning labels about their use.

The group recommended that labels warn against taking aspirin during the last three months of pregnancy because it could prolong labor and cause bleeding. The panel also said consumers should be warned not to take aspirin with certain prescription drugs.

The advisory group said the FDA should prohibit aspirin product label claims for relief of symptoms of arthritis or rheumatism because such claims may lead people to selftreat these diseases without first seeking medical attention.

Concerning acetaminophen, the chief aspirin substitute, the experts found no basis for claims that it was safer than aspirin.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy told a news briefing his agency would seek public comment on the recomendations before making any policy changes.

"I would expect this report, though, to lead to more explicit labeling, including essential new warnings that will make it easier for consumers to select a product to relieve pain and fever," Kennedy said.

The 1,200-page analgesic report is the largest received by FDA in a program to review all nonprescription drugs. Previous reports covered antacids, laxatives, cough-cold treatments and allergy products, among others.

Weakness in S.S. computer system

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Social Security computer system containing personal information on millions of Americans is open to fraud and unauthorized disclosure of confidential data, a government report says.

"Security procedures and controls for the (system) were not adequate to prevent fraud and abuse or to assure compliance with the requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974," said the report by the audit agency of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The audit examined the Social Security Administration's computer systems that contain records on the more than 27 million Americans who get Social Security checks and Supplemental Security Income payments.

The computer contains information on the amount of payments, family income and assets, medical histories and marital status.

Social Security Administration employes use the computer's 2,200 terminals across the country to maintain records on all benefit payments under the various Social Security programs, including Medicare and disability. The system also processes the millions of new claims for benefits that are received each year.

"The weaknesses (in the system) adversely affected the Social Security Administration's capability to protect the integrity of its data and prevent a compromise of personal data retained in the program records," the audit said.

The auditors said they did not find any cases of abuse or fraud — but they also said they didn't look when the survey was made last year.

"We did not attempt to determine whether the system has been misused, but, rather, whether the potential for misuse existed," it said.

The audit gave a laundry list of the problems it found with the system:

—About half of the computer terminals were installed in areas that could not be locked at night, thus possibly allowing unauthorized access to terminals;

—Too many employes knew the passwords that give access to the personal information, though their jobs did not require such knowledge;

—Reports on possible violations of computer security were too late to be useful and often inaccurate; and —The computer programs designed to provide additional security were ineffective in blocking unauthorized use of the system.

The audit report was made public by Reps. John Moss, D-Calif., and Charles Rose, D-N.C., who have asked for a General Accounting Office investigation of the computer system. That GAO study is now under way.

The HEW audit blamed many of the security problems on a lack of attention to the situation by top officials.

"Low priority was placed on insuring a sound ... security program," the audit report said.

The Social Security Administration said in comments appended to the report that "increasing efforts ... have been and are being devoted to improving and insuring the

In totaling your inventory for May 1977, I find a drastic increase over last year at this period.

Your inventory is much much to high. You need to reduce your inventory to maintain the proper balance of cash on hand.

In order to keep your selling prices as low as they have been and are now, you must raise additional cash to continue taking advantage of the manufactures discounts.

In purchasing for the 3 new stores you have over bought.

Due to soft market conditions our inventory has piled up.

It is my recommendation that you reduce your inventory by $35,000 to $40,000 immediately.

U.S. report gives solar energy lift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Solar energy may be able to compete with electricity in producing heat and hot water for large commercial and residential buildings as early as 1980, a new congressional study says.

The report by the Office of Technology Assessment, published Tuesday, suggests that Congress consider policies beyond what the Carter administration is endorsing to encourage development of large solar power units.

The study says rising electricity costs and falling solar equipment expenses may make even small solar electricity units economically competitive with conventional power plants.

But most buildings still would need a back-up conventional power system, the study says, adding that solar energy cannot compete with coal in industrial use for at least the next 20 years.

The study, nearly 1,000 pages long, was based on computer comparisons of solar energy devices with electric or natural gas systems.

It suggests that private homes can use the sun's rays to provide hot water and, perhaps, space heating, and adds that office and apartment buildings or hotels may find it even more financially attractive to turn to solar heating and hot water.

Even solar air conditioning may be feasible, perhaps by roofing over parking lots with solar energy collectors and burying heat-storing water tanks beneath the lots, the study says.

Heat collected by simple solar panels could be circulated through coils for direct heating, or used to drive devices called "heat pumps" that can be reversed to provide air conditioning.

If the federal Energy Research and Development Administration can meet its 1985 goal of reducing the cost of solar-electric cells by almost 97 per cent, the report says, it may become economical to generate electricity directly from sunlight, using crystal panels something like those that have helped power manned spacecraft and communications satellites.

Only the new, cheaper solar panels would be reasonable for private homes and other buildings that use relatively little electricity.

The report says increased use of solar energy would mean a cleaner environment and would increase employment, particularly in the building trades and in the manufacturing and maintenance of solar equipment.

Solar energy requires no mining or pumping of fuel from the Earth — the fuel is already "burning" some 93 million miles away, in the nuclear furnace of the sun.

In that sense, solar energy is free. But collecting and using it is expensive, mainly because of the cost of the necessary equipment.

For that reason, the study urges that solar energy be compared with conventional energy sources by taking account of the costs of building, fueling, operating and maintaining each system throughout its life span.

On that basis, the study ran computer calculations of solar energy costs under a wide variety of circumstances in four cities: Albquerque, N.M.; Omaha, Neb.; Boston and Fort Worth, Texas.

The calculations yielded 65 pages of tables with three pages of explanatory notes.

Without tax breaks for solar equipment, solar heating and hot water may be able to compete, dollar for dollar, with electric heating and hot water by 1980 in large buildings in Albuquerque, Boston and Fort Worth, the study reports.

With a 20 per cent tax credit for solar investment, it says, solar heating and hot water also would become competitive in Omaha.

Those four, the study says, were "the only cities for which adequate sunlight measurements exist" for the computer analysis.

Women smokers in menopause sooner

LONDON (AP) — Women who smoke undergo menopause sooner than nonsmokers, a survey of 57,000 hospital patients in seven countries shows.

The report in the current issue of the Lancet, a British medical weekly, was based on a survey of 25,000 patients in the Boston area and a survey of 32,000 persons at hospitals in the United States, Canada, Israel, New Zealand, Scotland, Italy and West Germany.

It said that at each age between 44 and 53, 35 per cent undergoing menopause had never smoked while 49 per cent smoked one pack of cigarettes or more a day.

The proportion who smoked half a pack a day was midway between former smokers and those who smoked one pack or more a day, the report said.

The average age for the onset of menopause, the so-called change of life when a woman stops menstruating, is about 50.

The findings were consistent in each of the seven countries, said the report by the Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program of Boston University Medical Center.

The authors theorized nicotine may influence the secretion of hormones that speed up menopause, or that cigarette smoke may induce the liver to create enzymes that affect the function of hormones.

The authors of the report, Hershel Jick and Jane Porter of the Boston University School of Medicine and Alan S. Morrison of the Harvard School of Public Health, said it was the first report on the relation of menopause to cigarette smoking.

GROUCHO MARX

Groucho improving

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Groucho Marx is in fair condition and "gradually getting better" in his bout with lung congestion, according to a Cedars-Sinai Medical Center spokesman.

Marx, 86, was readmitted to the hospital about two weeks ago for treatment of pneumonitis, a form of pneumonia. He had been discharged following hip surgery previously.

Marx's doctors have not decided when he would be released from the hospital this time.

ANITA BRYANT

Battle backfires

MIAMI (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant's talent agency is dropping her because of her battle against homosexuals.

"It's not in keeping with her career or my professional standing," Dick Shack of the Agency for the Performing Arts said Wednesday in reference to a soon-to-be published book by Miss Bryant about the Save Our Children campaign.

Miss Bryant, who does television commercials for Florida orange juice, helped organize the group that waged a successful campaign for repeal of a Dade County law that made it illegal to deny job and housing opportunities to homosexuals.

Shack is the husband of Dade County Commissioner Ruth Shack, who sponsored the law when it was put on the books last January.

He said his agency, which has represented Miss Bryant for the past 16 years, has had no formal contract with her since last September but continued to handle her affairs through verbal agreements.

LEE MAJORS

'$6 million man' back

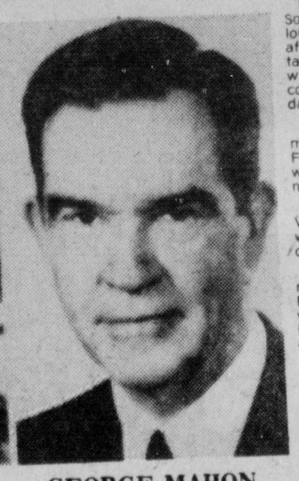
LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV's "Six Million Dollar Man" has agreed to a settlement with Universal Studios and will return to the show, a spokesman says. Actor Lee Majors said through the spokesman, "This is the best kind of settlement possible — when both sides win."

The agreement was not immediately confirmed by the studio or ABC, the network which broadcasts the series. Production had been held up and the studio had filed suit against Majors to force him to return.

Majors' personal manager, Jay Bernstein, said Wednesday that amicable agreement was reached including motion picture deals for Fawcett-Majors Productions, the company set up by Majors and his wife, Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

Production on the "Six Million Dollar Man" was expected to begin immediately for the new season.

Bernstein said that during his absence, Majors had starred in "A Matter of Inconvenience," which his company made for NBC.



GEORGE MAHON

Won't run again

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Rep. George Mahon says he will retire at the close of his current term, ending a 44-year career in Congress and a 52-year career in public office.

The Texas Democrat, who has served longer in the U.S. House of Representatives than any of his colleagues, said Wednesday he will not seek reelection in 1978. He did not disclose his future plans.

Queen says, 'thank you'

TILLAMOOK, Ore. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain has sent a communique to the people of Tillamook, thanking them for a sample of their prized product — Tillamook cheddar cheese.

The chamber of commerce in this Oregon coastal community recently sent the queen a two-pound loaf of the cheese to help her celebrate her Silver Jubilee, her 25th year on the throne.

Obituary

Ruth Maddox

Ruth Lucille Maddox of 1111 S. Reservoir St., Pomona, died Monday at a local convalescent hospital after a long illness.

Mrs. Maddox was born Dec. 7, 1891 in Palo, Iowa. She had been a resident of Pomona for 17 years. Prior to that, she lived 20 years in Wenatchee, Washington.

She was a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Surviving are four sons, Wallie Blum of Wenatchee, Wash. Harold Blum of Pomona, Howard Blum of Yucaipa and Leland Blum of Kennwick, Wash; a daughter, Thelma Blum of Westminster; a sister, Blanche Smith of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; 19 grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Services will be held Friday at 10 a.m. at Pomona Valley Mortuary. Elder Donald Stutler of Pomona Seventh-Day Adventist Church will officiate.

Burial will be in Shilo Cemetery, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on Monday.

Watson to seek his fifth term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County Assessor Philip Watson will seek a fifth term despite an investigation of his office and a heart condition.

Watson, 52, said Wednesday he will run again "because I think I've been a good assessor," even though he was not fully recovered "physically, mentally or emotionally" from recent surgery.

Watson defended his assessment practices. The county Board of Supervisors is investigating Watson for allegedly underassessing commercial and industrial property.

Board rejects abolishment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city's Board of Public Works has denounced a management audit recommending that the board and it's department be abolished.

The board, the only full-time, full-salaried commission in the city, said Wednesday that following the recommendation would be "costly, disruptive and regressive."

REUNITED — Three sisters, separated 40 years ago when they were adopted by three different families in Ohio, were reunited Wednesday at San Jose Municipal Airport. Two of the sisters, Dorthea Fox, left, Springfield, Ohio, and Betty Louise Debus, center, of Lake Stevens, Wash, found each other 22 years ago and spent the time since looking for their "little sister," Jeanne Martin, right, of Santa Clara, Calif.

Detroit strike ends

DETROIT (AP) — City employes, whose surprise strike left Detroiters without bus service or garbage pickup, returned to work today after a tentative agreement on a three-year contract.

The settlement, reached shortly after 2 a.m., was unanimously endorsed by representatives of 19 locals of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, which represents some 8,000 city workers.

Dispatchers for the city transportation department said their 879-bus fleet was making 85 per cent of morning rushhour runs and would be back to normal by afternoon. The city bus system carries about 200,000 riders a day. The city has no subway system.

Detroit General Hospital said its day shifts were fully staffed starting at 5 a.m. and its outpatient clinic was reopened.

Police said "all but a couple" of their civilian operators were reporting and uniformed officers who had taken over emergency phones would be relieved as their shifts ended.

Garbage pickups, however, were not fully normal.

"Based on the reports I have, we're at about 50 per cent so far," said Supt. Alvin Johnson of the environmental protection and maintenance department.

Lloyd Simpson, director of AFSCME Council 77, called the pact "fair to both city employes and Detroit's taxpayers."

Simpson said the agreement retained cost of living increases, health coverage and sick leave provisions from the previous contract, which expired last week. A contract extension expired at midnight Tuesday, prompting the Wednesday morning walkout.

Details on wages and other provisions were not immediately released.

The one-day strike involved more employes than any in Detroit's history, and affected about 1.3 million residents of the nation's sixth-largest city.

The walkout, along with the observance of picket lines by nonstriking employes, forced the shutdown of the Detroit Zoo and the Institute of Arts.

HUMMY HOME — These two tiny hummingbird babies share a nest built by their parents on the leaf of a Boston fern at the home of Longview (Wash.) Daily News photographer Jan Fardell. Eventually the pair will grow to such a size that only one at a time will be able to sleep. Nest flying time will be right behind.

Grandparents' gripe

It's no fun to be forgotten

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

There really are people who care. I joined 200 of them in a neighboring community. They gave up their Sunday night television watching, card games and social activities to participate in an informal seminar on the problems of the aging population. It was a mixed audience with half apparently over 65, the others in the 30-to-50 age bracket, and a few young women in their late teens or early 20s.

It seemed to be an average gathering of middle class citizenry. They were neither rich nor poor, but very much interested in the problems of the Senior Citizens.

A moderator and three speakers told us briefly of some of the problems facing the country's largest minority — the old folks. These are the problems most of us already know. One speaker did offer advice on how to invest our money — if we had enough income to worry about how to invest it. Then a microphone was passed around to enable the people in the audience to question the panelists. No one wanted to ask questions.

They wanted to make statements about the absence of that old physician - patient relationship, the high medical expenses and the small return from Medicare, our failure to do productive work without being penalized by a loss of some Social Security benefits if earnings exceeded a ridiculously low limitation, that depressed feeling of being alone and unwanted due to a lack of communication with their children.

Soon the seminar became a forum for family relationships. The issue appeared to be ducked by the middle-aged women and men. Probably they thought they were doing their duty in the month of May, bringing out the flowers delivered on Mother's Day or else taking Ma and Pa out for a Mother's Day Sunday dinner.

Suggestions were made that there should be a closer relationship between grandchildren and grandparents, an excellent idea that works only up to a certain age and time. Grandchildren are wonderful to have around. Grandma is a convenient built-in baby-sitter. She tells such interesting stories and she takes granddaughter shopping for toys and pretty dresses. She's available to play house or play with the dolls. Grandpa is a great man to the young grandson. He can build things and put toys together. They can go fishing or to sports events, and grandpa can even crank up his arthritic arm to pitch while the young boy practices his batting. This early companionship is wonderful for both generations.

And if grandma and grandpa have moved south into the sun belt, when winter vacations come around, the kiddies can shuck off the ski suits, leggings and other warm clothing and visit the grandparents for more fun and games.

But grandchildren too grow older and the time comes when they have many new interests. The little kiddies have grown up to be young women and young men. They are busy with sports, hobbies, preparing for their careers, solidifying friendships with others in their age group — and they become socially conscious and socially active. They love grandma and grandpa but as they grow up they also like to do many other things which now occupy their time and attention.

As our grandchildren grow older we can continue thinking they are an important part of our lives. But we no longer are as an important part of their lives.

Come to think of it, has anyone ever seen grandchildren carrying around and showing snapshot photos of their grandparents?

SIZE IS RELATIVE — The Georgia harvester ant, right, the largest ant in the state, is dwarfed by its South American cousin, Dinoponera gigantea. The giant ant, about an inch and a half long, was found by Murray Blum, University of Georgia entomology professor, during an Amazon jungle expedition. Sponsored by the National Science Foundation, Blum was with scientists searching for insects which contain body chemicals with medicinal properties.

Valley schools in $$ squeeze

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Valley school districts are being caught in a financial squeeze once again.

The districts must plan their 1977-78 budgets without additional state funding — and without knowing when and if those monies will become available.

The problem is that the state Legislature adjourned recently for its summer recess without enacting any of several school finance bills that were pending.

By the time the Legislature reconvenes the first week of August, valley school boards will be in the midst of approving their final budgets.

And some local districts, such as Bonita Unified, are in serious financial trouble. They need more funds from the state just to meet current expenses.

Assembly Bill 65, sponsored by Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-Carmichael, is the key school finance bill which remains in the Legislature. It may go to the Assembly's conference committee on July 25, but that is unlikely. Even so, it still must be passed by the Assembly and Senate and signed by Governor Brown before school districts can reap any benefits.

According to sources in Sacramento, Brown would not approve the Greene bill without concurrent property tax relief legislation.

Local districts such as Bonita have problems planning budgets that may be tentatively based on more state funding.

Bonita Supt. James Johnson said his district would get about $350,000 from the Greene bill for 1977-78, but if the bill is not passed, it could be a serious blow financially.

"We're probably in worse shape than anyone in the valley," Johnson declared. "We've had the highest tax rate delinquency in the county for two years at 7 per cent."

Johnson explained that the district has been in deficit spending for years, and actually went broke one year. "We're a district that isn't growing . . ."

On top of that, Johnson says, teachers have been unhappy since the district has not come to an agreement with them on a wage increase. "They think we're stalling but no one knows how this (Greene) bill will be written."

Pomona schools Supt. Charles Carpenter feels the delay on passage of the bill is a "fact of political life. But it's difficult to plan a budget without knowing what your income will be."

The district will proceed to plan its budget according to various priorities, added Carpenter. "We have more needs than resources available but our financial situation is not as difficult as in some other years."

Claremont's school budget will not be "directly affected," said Supt. Richard Kirkendall, "because we have sufficient reserves to see us through this year."

However, without any new state monies by 1978-79, the district could be "drastically" affected, he added.

Al Searfoss, assistant superintendent for business in the Chino school district, said it "very definitely hurts" in planning the budget without anticipated state funding. "You have to make assumptions."

Searfoss said that despite the district's growth, reserves are low and "We're anxious for any improvement we can get. We're not in that good shape."

He noted that Chino should get from $200,000 to $400,000 from the Greene bill. And he expects an emergency clause in the bill to permit school districts to revise their final budgets to include new monies.

Chaffey schools Supt. Mike Dirksen said his district is not in a financial crunch, "so we're forging ahead with the present system. Any new funds would be welcome, of course."

Referring to the Greene bill, Dirksen noted, "I don't get too excited about potentials unless they're realities."

Cite Pomona election violations

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

Many candidates in Pomona's recent municipal election have failed to comply with the Political Reform Act of 1974, which requires candidates for public office to itemize source of their campaign funds and how money was spent.

A review of final campaign statements by candidates, submitted to City Clerk Larry Thomas in late June, show glaring deficiencies in several cases and imprecise accounting in others.

One marginal candidate went so far as to refuse submission of a final report.

Failure of candidates to file reports in compliance with the Political Reform Act, placed into law by California voters as Proposition 9 in 1974, can result in criminal or civil penalties.

Thomas said he would immediately ask candidates, by letter, to file amended reports where necessary. If no response is made, he said the matter would be turned over to the District Attorney and City Attorney Patrick Sampson for potential legal action.

The report containing the most obvious deficiencies was submitted by the biggest spender in the city elections, Richard C. Brownell.

Brownell, a former mayor, states he spent $15,788 in seeking election to the city's highest office. Where the money came from, however, is unclear.

He shows contributions totalling only $3,323 and a campaign-ending deficit of $8,437, with no explanation of any loans, outstanding debts or contributions from himself, which the law requires.

Nor is there any explanation of the approximate $4,000 difference between the sum of his contributions and deficit, and actual expenditures.

In addition, Brownell lists only one monetary contributor by name.

(The law requires all contributors of $50 or more to be listed by name, occupation and the amount of their cumulative contribution.)

That compares to a comprehensive list of more than 70 donors to Mayor Charles Bader's campaign, 18 for Councilman Benjamin Ochoa, 9 for council candidate John Stanley, 7 each for Councilmen Stanton Selby and Adrian Wright, 25 for former Mayor Ray Lepire, and 6 for candidate Gertha Speiginer.

In addition to Brownell's campaign statement, others filing incomplete reports were William Koch, John Stanley, Irving Clark, William Kaminski and Henry Cole.

Koch reports spending $6,610 in his campaign for the council, but shows only $294 in receipts, with the balance unaccounted for.

Stanley states he collected $3,951 in money and materials, while spending $3,787. He does not itemize any of his expenses, however.

Irving Clark lists expenses of $577, but lists no receipts of any kind.

Kaminski, a candidate for mayor, shows expenses of $770 but itemizes only one $90 expenditure.

Cole, also a candidate for mayor, filed a short form claiming he never collected or expended more than $200, but has refused to file a "final" report as is required by law.

In addition to them, Lepire's statement includes an ending deficit of $1,451.

Candidates whose statements appeared generally in order included Bader, Ochoa, Wright, Selby, Mrs. Speiginer, John Ridley, Clay Bryant, Manuel R. Ramirez and Walter Clark.

See compromise in La Verne mobilehome park dispute

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

La Verne City Council, seeing the possibility of a compromise for the first time in seven months, has agreed to delay passage of a controversial rent control ordinance aimed at the city's eight mobilehome parks.

The council put off action till Aug. 1 to allow park operators and their tenants to work out an agreement that calls for a two-year freeze on rentals.

Such an offer already has been made by The Fountains and by Foothill Terrace, two of the city's largest mobilehome parks, providing the rent control law was not passed.

Spokesmen for the other six parks said they also would consider such an offer rather than submit to involuntary restrictions on rent.

More than 500 residents overflowed the La Verne College auditorium in a 3½-hour special council meeting. Twenty-eight persons spoke at what Mayor Mike M. Morales described as the largest attendance he has ever seen at a council meeting.

But by the time it was over, most of those who spoke agreed with Councilman Alan Mackay that the rent control solution was "the solution of last resort, one that would break down communication."

Rowena Whitmore, a resident of the La Verne Mobile Country Club, had said earlier that what the tenants needed was "not rent control so much, not scare tactics, but rent stabilization. Rent control has never been good for anyone; the investor needs a fair deal."

And Howard Collister said he and the other tenants have "no quarrel" with the present management of the Twin Oaks Mobile Home Park.

But he said he was dismayed by the "scare tactics" used at some of the other parks where residents virtually were forced to sign petitions against rent control.

"This is not negotiation," he declared. "It is capitulation. Men of good will can negotiate anything."

Robert Donath, manager of the La Verne Mobile Country Club, told the council he was "shocked and frightened by the concept of rent control." He said the problem really was caused by the attitude of the owners of Casitas La Verne Mobile Home Park who had served notice they intended to raise rentals by about 20 per cent in September.

Casitas had sent letters to its tenants that the raises were the result of the mobilehome owners' demand for rent control, and that rent would rise even more to pay for the cost of anticipated legal costs.

Jim Bouwers, a resident of the park, called the letter a "direct retaliation to us and an insult to the council."

Attorneys who represented most of the mobilehome parks contended that the rent control ordinance was unconstitutional, violating the 14th Amendment which guarantees everyone equal protection under the law, and told the council the operators would go to court to fight it.

They pointed out that such a fight as well as the administration of the rent control would be costly, and asked the council whether it was prepared to spend the additional money.

Melvin Laven, who said he was a homeowner, declared that he didn't want any part of his tax dollars used to monitor disputes in mobilehome rentals.

And as the hour approached 11, it became apparent that the council would just as soon pass up the opportunity to become the first city in the state to have a rent control law.

At first, Mayor Morales suggested that the council introduce the ordinance but hold up its adoption pending some compromise between rentors and landlords.

But the rest of the council declined to go even that far. They agreed to a month's postponement after the park owners said they would meet with their residents.

"Fine," Morales declared. "But if nothing happens by Aug. 1, I'll be the first to move for rent control."

Choose 4 from West End for grand jury

Four West End residents have been chosen to serve on the 1977-78 San Bernardino County Grand Jury.

Dr. John Skewis of Upland, Joan Bailin of Upland, June Wallin of Ontario and Joycetta Elliott of Chino were among the 19 persons chosen at random to serve on the panel that serves as the investigative arm for the county.

Chino city fees going up, up, up

Fees charged for many city services in Chino will be going up soon, the City Council decided Tuesday night.

Faced with increased costs in providing certain services the council was asked to make some revisions in the city's comprehensive fee resolution that includes most liscences and permits in the city.

Dance and dance hall permits and fees, business licences, contractor fees, photography permits and numerous building and construction fees and permits have been raised to reflect increased costs in providing such services.

The fee adjustments were urged by Chino Director of Community Development Dennis Chiniaeff.

Dance permits are being raised from $3 to $5 per night or from $20 to $30 quarterly. In addition, operators will be required to pay $100 per year and deposit $300 with the city in case there is damage to city property resulting from a dance.

Business license fees will be increased for any business with gross receipts of more than $1.9 million.

The present $500 maximum fee charged businesses will no longer be in effect.

Contractors' license fees will generally be raised from $5 to $40 per year. Officials believe, however, that small contractors will actually pay less to the city.

Photography permit fees will be raised from the existing $35 per year to a rate of $25 per day, or $100 per year. Chiniaeff reported photography businesses had been a major source of complaints from citizens. He claimed license enforcement was a helpful way in identifying and discouraging the less reputable operators.

For land developers, fees in most building and construction areas will be going up. Parcel map checking fees presently cost $50. Developers will now pay $50 plus $15 per lot.

Park development fees will be increased by 25 per cent. Actual cost will vary from development to development, however.

Planning department fees in most areas will go up substantially. Increases will vary from no change in present fees to a possible 225 per cent increase in the cost of Environmental impact reports.

Repealing a risky program

For the past 12 years the state of California has been paying the counties in the state $4,000 for each convicted felon who is not sent to prison.

The idea at the start was that the $4,000 a year would be used by the counties to rehabilitate the convicts under strict probation procedures.

This program has been successful in one aspect. It has helped reduce prison populations. On the other hand it has failed in its other stated goals to rehabilitate criminals and increase protection of the public.

By not sending convicted felons to prison, the courts have in effect returned those felons to the street where they are free to engage in the same criminal activity that got them into trouble in the first place.

There have been several attempts to repeal the probation subsidy program but the Legislature has failed to act. State Sen. George Deukmejian has introduced a bill in the State Senate in another attempt to eliminate the subsidy program.

He proposes, instead, to provide local governments with funding necessary to develop crime prevention programs. These programs would focus particularly on the increasing problem of youthful offenders and seek ways to prevent crime from happening.

A program that has not worked should not be allowed to continue at great cost and risk to the public.

New Alaskan oil dilemma

Nine years after discovery of the huge oilfield at Prudhoe Bay, oil at last is flowing through the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline — and the nation has a brand new energy headache.

The problem is that by Oct. 1 the pipeline will be transporting 1.2 million barrels a day, twice as much as West Coast refineries can absorb. Moreover, no pipeline is ready to move the surplus to the Midwest, where it is much needed.

Clearly, a permanent solution must include a pipeline connecting the West Coast with crude-hungry midcontinent refineries. Until that is done oil industry officials and President Carter's energy advisers have three temporary ways to go, unfortunately none of them attractive.

The choices are to sell unneeded Alaska crude to Japan in return for Middle East oil delivered to the East Coast; to ship it in tankers through the Panama Canal to the Gulf Coast; or to relieve the glut by shutting down the Naval Reserve oilfield at Elk Hills, Calif.

Purely from an economic standpoint, selling some 600,000 barrels a day to Japan makes sense. However, the political and psychological costs would be excessive.

Too many people believe there is no oil shortage and the "crisis" is a ripoff engineered by a greedy industry. Seeing Alaska crude flowing to Japan would reinforce such suspicions and make the public less likely to cooperate in energy conservation.

Also, trading Alaskan for Middle Eastern crude would keep this country highly vulnerable to another oil embargo, hardly a sound policy.

Since supertankers can't use the Panama Canal, the Alaska surplus would have to move to Gulf ports in small vessels; an expensive and wasteful procedure. However, this probably will turn out to be the least bad temporary measure.

Closing down the Elk Hills would deprive the country of 250,000 barrels a day of domestic production and make us more dependent on the unstable Middle East.

With about a year of work a gas pipeline from Maland, Tex. to Long Beach, Calif. could be "turned around" and converted to carry Alaska crude. That would be an excellent step, since Midland could easily be connected to pipelines serving the Midwest.

However, California authorities and environmental radicals are fighting the unloading of tankers at Long Beach on the grounds that it would add to air pollution. The protests are a bit reminiscent of those that delayed the Alaska pipeline for years and helped bloat its cost to $7.7 billion.

Because of what it called "unreasonable" demands from California air-quality officials, Exxon has reluctantly withdrawn from the Long Beach project. It is to be hoped that the Carter administration will not permit this pipeline to fall victim to regulatory sabotage.

The plain truth is that a country which can send a space shuttle flying about piggyback on a 747 has the technology to unload oil safely at Long Beach. Each barrel of Alaska oil used in this country means $14 not sent abroad and that much less leverage by foreign suppliers.

Supervisors set poor example

Dear Editor:

Recently there has been much criticism of county workers and their demand for increased salaries. I am an eligibility worker for the county of Los Angeles. My job is demanding and I work hard for the money I receive. It is very difficult for me to accept the criticism from my Board of Supervisors that my demands are out of reason, inflationary or that I am not worth the money I receive. Those who have the right to criticize me are those who have set a good example, and those who have put the same limitation on themselves as they request me to do.

As the general public listens to the rhetoric of our Board of Supervisors, are they aware that the salaries of this board have increased 96.66 per cent in the past four years? In 1974 their salary was $25,000. Just one year later, it was increased to $40,322, a 61.23 per cent increase. The following year it was increased to $45,299, comprising a 12.34 per cent increase. In September of this year they will receive an 8.53 per cent increase to $49,166.

In 1973 the top salary for an eligibility worker was $10,500. The following year it went up to $11,287 and the next year to $12,087. For the past year the salary was $12,702, making a 20.97 per cent increase over a four-year period. The highest annual percentage increase for an eligibility worker was 7.41 per cent as compared to 61.28 per cent for a county supervisor, and a total salary increase of $2,202 in four years for an eligibility worker contrasts to $24,166 for a county superyisor.

I would like the taxpayers to be aware of how their tax money is being spent and who the ones are who are setting the example of runaway inflation. In these days of double digit inflation, we are the ones who have held the line.

North Korea: '1984' today

WASHINGTON — Having written about repression in South Korea, we have sought to put the story in perspective by investigating conditions in North Korea. By all accounts it is ruled by one of the cruelest regimes in the world.

Western analysts don't have a full picture of what goes on above the 38th parallel, except that it is one of the most isolated societies on earth.

The border is tightly controlled. The few details that have leaked out provide a dim outline of a highly authoritarian government and a brutally regimented society. In the words of one American analyst: "It is '1984' — in spades."

Every aspect of North Korean life is controlled. The day is literally divided into 480-minute segments: Eight hours are spent on work; eight hours are spent on study and mass organization; eight hours are given to eating, sleeping and other necessities.

The degree of party membership is greater in North Korea than in any other Communist country. The Communist party is supplemented by mass organizations for every element of society — youth, women, labor. There is tremendous psychological pressure upon everyone to join, to conform, to participate, to show a "positive" attitude.

Even children of 5 and 6 are regimented into organizations, where they are taught to run wooden bayonets through the "U.S. imperialists."

All property in North Korea belongs to the state. People are permitted to work garden plots, for example. But they don't own them; they are merely on loan.

Food and clothing are rationed; travel is restricted. When North Koreans leave their home districts, for whatever reason, they must carry their travel permits and ration cards.

The few who travel abroad are thoroughly screened beforehand. While in another country, they are required to remain virtually to themselves. They avoid all contact with foreigners, remain in their hotel rooms, visit no restaurants, attend no movies, stroll in no parks.

Of course, North Koreans have no freedom of expression. The common man is convinced, not without reason, that someone is watching him at all times. There is no free press; religion has been outlawed. A former Christian mission complex in Pyongyang, for instance, has been converted into Kim Il Sung University.

WEST POINT STORY — Several West Point cadets were caught last year cheating on their exams, a violation of the honor system. Now the board that oversees the military academy has had its own honor questioned.

The Military Academy Board of Visitors is supposed to keep a stern watch over West Point. But one of the appointees, Rep. Thomas Dowrey, D.-N.Y., has accused his fellow visitors of improprieties as bad as anything the cadets did.

In a private letter to President Carter, the congressman has complained about the honor violations of the overseers. Under the West Point code, a cadet is supposed to turn in any offenders. Downey, therefore, felt he could do no less at the board level. Here's his litany of complaints:

— The board drafted a report full of "inaccuracies and omissions," he charged. It contained no mention, for example, of some substantive discussions. Questions were asked about the honor system, women cadets and the faculty. "None of this important information," he complained, "is detailed in the report."

— The law requires that "detailed minutes" must be kept of board meetings, he contended. Yet there was no transcript of the April meeting. The unrecorded minutes, he charged, would have "documented the lack of board procedures."

— The board commended instead of condemned the outgoing superintendent, Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, who was responsible for the cheating fiasco. Complained an outraged Downey: "I felt that during the West Point cheating scandal, Lt. Gen. Berry lost control of his command in the classic military sense, to the detriment of the academy."

— The militiary academy may also be on an academic decline. The class of 1980 has lower mean scores than do their counterparts at the Naval and Air Force academies, the college board figures show.

Meanwhile, a Pentagon team is conducting an exhaustive investigation of West Point. Military sources expect it to be highly critical of the academy and to recommend sweeping changes.

Our minority government

Abner McCall is an academic Georgie Patton, uncompromisingly intolerant of inefficiency.

He is president of Baylor University, militantly Baptist.

He voted for Jimmy Carter; he's sorry.

Our loquatious U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young pulled the cork. He said, "The government of South Africa is an illegitimate government."

Presumably, Ambassador Young meant that the government of South Africa did not represent the majority of that country's people.

Suddenly, Abner McCall was reminded that our government does not represent the majority of our people.

Recent public opinion polls show that our Congress has only about a 25 per cent approval rating, and it's likely the federal bureaucracy and the federal courts rank even lower.

This means that millions of Americans no longer feel that the federal government represents us — that it does not respond to our wishes; that, in fact, it responds to whatever minority is noisiest.

Sociologist Robert Michels once observed that power "issuing from the people ends by raising itself above the people."

McCall believes that our regulatory, regimented, restrictive, dictatorial bureaucracy has now raised itself so far above the people as to become what Ambassador Young calls "illegitimate."

We want to love our country, but we cannot identify with it.

Campaigning for President, Jimmy Carter had made much of the fact that he was not "Washington establishment." He promised to restore the federal government to the people to reduce the bureaucracy, to eliminate stifling federal regulations and some of the bureaus, agencies, commissions, authorities, offices and departments from which the regulations pour forth.

He even promised to balance the budget.

In half a year in office, almost everything President Carter has proposed contradicts those promises.

He now sees no prospect of balancing the budget.

His energy plan and his consumer protection department involve a host of new regulations and new regulators, and his support for repeal of the Hatch Act would, in fact, strengthen and entrench the federal bureaucracy.

Our nation's treasured Declaration of Independence from foreign domination includes this complaint against George the Third: "He had erected a multitude of New Offices and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people and eat out their substance."

Tom Jefferson, where are you when we need you today!

I have sought to paraphrase Abner McCall; I hope fairly.

His premise must haunt us all.

In our much vaunted determination to promote majority rule for others, are we losing it ourselves?

In our much vaunted determination to promote majority rule for others, are we losing it ourselves?

In our much vaunted determination to promote majority rule for others, are we losing it ourselves?

Opinion surveys show Americans 87 per cent opposed to city school busing, yet their government demands it.

Just in jest

What does one say to those nosey do-gooders you have never seen before who don't hesitate to knock at your door and solicitously inquire, "Are you saved?" — answer "yes" or answer "no," it makes no difference. You are invariably in for a lengthy lecture or an endless "God bless you, my brother!" Either way it is a bit embarrassing. So, on the theory that God helps those who help themselves, I finally developed what I thought was the perfect answer.

"Bonjour," I smilingly greet my Bible-carrying callers. And when they ask the fatal question, "Vous parlez en francais j'espere," I reply. Then, when they shake their heads, "Je le regrette," I say, and politely close the door.

Unfortunately the last time a soul-saver rang my doorbell, it was someone who spoke French.

Legislator compensation

By EARL G. WATERS

Bowing to inflation, the legislature is on the way to giving itself a pay raise. In the closing days before taking a summer vacation, the Assembly approved AB 1396 by Assemblyman Louis Papan. It would boost by 10 per cent the present pay of lawmakers, pegging the new salary at $25,555.

It is not discernible whether or not the 11 members voting against the raise were sincere or merely pretending for the benefit of the folks at home. They cast their "no" votes with the knowledge it wouldn't stop them from getting the raise since there were far more "ayes" than were needed.

Nevertheless, there will be some who voted for the increase who will never receive it because it won't become effective until after next year's elections.

And even though the lawmakers took the full amount of raise permitted by the constitution, the issue of compensation, always controversial, is far from being settled.

To the multitude of workers earning no more than minimum wages, the near $50-a-week increase must appear a fortune. To the lawmakers comparing their $2,300 annual increase to the $13,000 jump congressmen gave themselves this year, it is a pittance.

Exactly what appropriate pay should be for the state's lawmakers, now committed to full-time effort, presents a problem which cannot be solved by the legislature because of the political realities.

Not that it would be any great task to arrive at a reasonable salary for full-time work requiring the services of people with the capabilities the public expects of their legislators.

But there remains a large segment, maybe even a majority, of the public which doesn't concede that lawmaking should be a full-time occupation. They are steeped in the concept of a citizen government wherein representation is provided by part-time citizen-legislators rather than the full-time "professional" which the current lawmaker fancies himself to be.

Aside from that vast difference in viewpoint, the lawmakers have compounded the question by granting themselves fringe benefits such as $900 a month "living expenses," free mailings, free automobiles and gasoline, as well as a liberal retirement plan. Thus the salary received doesn't reflect the total compensation package.

Recognizing these problems which have existed since the voters handed the job of setting legislative pay to the members in 1966, Speaker Leo McCarthy has been working quietly behind the scenes for support of his plan to turn the matter of compensation over to an independent commission. As he has stated, the lawmakers are hardly in a position to make objective appraisals of their worth.

While the idea would seem to be an improvement over the present system, it is not without its own problems. First off, how to devise a commission truly independent of the legislature? Secondly, would it be permanent, thus risking yet another bureaucracy of government? And, should it have the power to set the salaries or merely recommend? Would the voters have final approval or would they be asked to create a commission thereafter free to make decisions for them?

In view of the distinct convictions of many Californians that the legislators spend too much time in session and not enough in interim study and at home, perhaps the first step should be to create a commission merely to study and devise a proposal for submission to the voters.

They will find there are many who would be willing to pay the lawmakers considerably more if they would promise to stay home and quit passing so many laws.

Ann Landers

Happiest people are the busiest

Dear Ann: I am a person of simple taste. I don't need much to make me happy. A can of beer, two good baseball teams, a freeway and a tank full of gas. A sunny day in early June. A brisk run at sunrise. A pretty girl who smiles when I look her way. A short story by William Faulkner.

None of these will pay the rent so I have to work — which I hate, but I realize a person must be practical. What I need to know is why should I kill myself to meet someone else's definition of success?

To me, success is having enough money to prepare tomorrow's meal. Since I was old enough to talk I was told I was brilliant and would make a lot of money and have the world on a string. So here I am 23, netting $80 a week, but I'm genuinely happy and don't want a thing.

My father (who has ulcers) is ashamed of me. My mother (her life is the beauty salon and clothes) thinks I'm a disgrace. I respect your opinion and would appreciate your opinion of my lifestyle. Am I wrong? Are they right? Where do you stand? — Jerry In Yonkers

Dear Jerry: The most revealing part of your letter can be found in four words, "work — which I hate."

Why does a smart guy like you hate work? Don't you realize money is only one of the benefits of labor? If you hate your job and view it as something you must do so you can eat the next day, you are wasting your time and probably ripping off your employer.

This country wasn't built by men who wanted nothing more out of life than an can of beer, a tank full of gas and a story by Faulkner.

And it's a good thing, because if everyone thought as you do we'd still be living in caves. There would be no progress in the sciences or the arts — or in any of the areas that separate us from primitive people.

As a person who has worked very hard for many years (and I didn't need the money) I can tell you, my young friend, that work can be tremendously rewarding and wonderful fun. My idea of hell would be a life of leisure. The happiest people I know are the busiest. The most miserable are the idle rich.

I'm sorry about your dad's ulcers, but I'll bet your relationship with him has a lot to do with why you hate work. Anything HE likes, you probably hate. Too bad you didn't get that problem resolved earlier. Since you are only 23, it's not too late.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently the Idaho Statesman carried your column about veneral disease. The quiz was beneficial to a large number of readers but it ignored the gays completely.

Your personal viewpoint of the gays is well known, yet we do exist and have a right to know how VD affects us. — Gay And Clean

Dear G. And C.: Since you young gays are generally more active sexually than heterosexuals, the only additional advice I have for you is to get a complete physical checkup at least once every six months — and don't hesitate to reveal the names of your contacts should you become infected. This isn't finking. It's a public service.

Few handsome and tall blonds

Wouldn't be wise for a single girl to set her heart on finding a tall, blond, handsome man. Odds run 13 to one against her getting a six-footer. They go three to one against her meeting a blond. And as for handsome, don't know the odds exactly, but they're about the same as for beautiful.

In a churchyard near Boston, Mass., is a tombstone that reads in part: " . . . of pneumonia, supervaining consumption, complicated by other diseases, the main symptom of which was insanity."

A study of various records shows the average cowboy 100 years ago worked the range only seven years before settling down. And his average age, 24.

SURGERY

Q. "How many people in this country every year now get surgical operations to change their sexes?"

A. Probably about 400. In 1975, at least 300 did so. It's no longer uncommon surgery. About 40 medical centers nationwide are into this thing now.

Q. "How many books had Marilyn Durham written before she wrote the bestseller 'The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing'?"

A. None.

Did I mention seven out or 10 crimes in this country are committed by people under age 25?

Under early English common law, any neighbor who heard a "human cry" was obliged to investigate, and if it came from the victim of a crime, to pursue, and if possible, subdue the criminal. Our Language man says his legal term "human cry" evolved in the vernacular as "hue and cry."

RATS!

In the polite societies of 100 years ago, "trousers" was considered a vulgar word as was "legs." And in fact, piano "limbs" were clothed. What nonsense! Today, between the TV ads about feminine hygiene and hemorrhoids, you hear the game show wits deliver the exploits of sex and scatalogy, the lewd winkings of jailhouse lingo, the rape of simple comfort in conversation. Clearly, those Victorian tidy tongues of yesteryear were so dirty minded that they had to bend double backwards. And clearly, too, these loose-lipped TV talkers with the cravings of whip-and-spur deviates are so dirty minded that they have to bend double forwards. Whatever happened to that prince of decency and reason, Huckleberry Finn? Aren't there any Mark Twain mentalities left? Where's Will Rogers? Rats!

Dr. Miller

Cool evenings can get warm

DEAR DR. MILLER: My hamsters are breeding like mad. Babies popping out all over the place. I thought hamsters didn't breed in hot weather. — L.S.

DEAR L.S.: Hamsters halt romance only when they have to. Fortunately, from their standpoint, many hot days come equipped with cool nights. Hamsters, being nocturnal and reasonably wise in the ways of love besides, quite naturally mate and propagate (frequently, as you noted) in the cool of the evenings.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If you suspect you dog has been poisoned, should you attempt to empty his stomach first with hydrogen peroxide or something like that, or should you get in to the doctor first? — K.O.

DEAR K.O.: Home treatment is seldom a justification for delay in getting a poisoned dog in to the doctor. That's the first priority. If, however, you had a safe emetic (a drug to cause vomiting such as oral, medicinal hydrogen peroxide) handy, knew how to use it, if the dog was capable of swallowing, and if the poison was of a type where vomiting was desirable (i.e., strychnine) then yes, a quick home attempt to induce vomiting would be justified. You'd quickly give the emetic, then rush the dog to the hospital without waiting to see what effect it would have. But getting the dog to the doctor without delay is of paramount importance. Consider, too, some cases which appear to be poisoning may, in actuality, be something else. Then delay, and possibly the emetic itself, could only complicate the problem.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Blinky, my cat, has this skin thing, and it's taking an awful long time to heal up. My veterinarian has Blinky on pills and some goop for the skin. I just can't help but wonder, though, if there might not be some other skin goop which would heal it up faster? Blinky and I would both be grateful if there was. — M.A.

DEAR M.A.: Skin problems are frequently difficult to treat, and, occasionally, response is poor regardless of the treatment. Blinky (and you, too) should be grateful the skin condition is responding, even though the rate seems slower than you'd like. Unfortunately, many conditions do respond slowly, if at all. You may lose what ground has been gained, and more, by switching from something which is producing results, albeit slowly, to different, unproven therapy. Occasionally, a skin problem may respond dramatically to a single treatment. All too often, though, even the best possible response seems to take forever.

The seventh commandment

Marge poured me a cup of coffee and said, "Have you noticed how quiet it is around here?"

"Yeah, where are the kids?"

"This morning, I posted the Six Commandments for Summer on the refrigerator door and it's working out great."

On the refrigerator was a page from a yellow lined tablet with the following declarations:

1. THOU SHALT NOT SPEAK THE FOLLOWING WORDS EVER: "There's nothing to do."

2. THOU SHALT NOT WATCH TELEVISION LONGER THAN FOUR HOURS AT ONE SITTING.

3. THOU SHALT NOT COVET THY NEIGHBOR'S BICYCLES, SKATEBOARDS, SWIMMING POOL OR ICE CREAM.

4. THOU SHALT NOT PLAY IN WATER IN HARD SHOES OR CHANGE CLOTHES MORE THAN FOUR TIMES A DAY.

5. THOU SHALT NOT KILL . . . THY BROTHER, THY SISTER, THY PLAYMATE, THY PARENTS.

6. THOU SHALT MAKE THY OWN GOOD TIMES USING IMAGINATION AND CREATIVITY.

Marge's five-year-old came into the kitchen and said, "Mom, can you go in the crawl space in the attic and get down the sled? I'm using my imagination and creativity."

When Marge returned, her daughter tugged at her slacks and said, "Would you mind turning on the oven and going to the store to get some chocolate chips? We are having a fair and I am keeping busy."

"Mom," said another son, "a dart fell behind the bunk bed and I need it to keep myself occupied."

"Mrs. Roth," said a neighbor child, "I don't want to punch in Ralph's face but he's hogging the skateboard and won't let us have a turn. Tell him to share."

"Mom, would you get the ice water? It's on the top shelf of the refrigerator and I can't get it without a chair."

"Mom, could you take the knots out of my shoes so I can play in the water?"

"Mom, could you call Debbie's mother and see if I could play with her Frisbee?"

I watched as Marge tiredly added another commandment to the list:

"THOUGH SHALT NOT INTERRUPT MOTHER WHEN SHE IS ROCKING BACK AND FORTH HUMMING TO HERSELF."

Dr. Lamb

When sexual desire wanes

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing you a few lines. I want to know when sex leaves a man altogether and he doesn't want a woman anymore, or does it?

DEAR READER — In general both males and females are sexual creatures from birth to death. How this is expressed depends upon many social and psychological factors. Health is also a factor. However, an elderly woman dying of cancer of the breast, and receiving male hormone to help control the cancer may still have an overwhelming sex desire.

Sexual desire of a man for one particular woman may vary in relation to their more basic relationship. If he is bored, or if the couple have basic problems the desire for sex in that situation may disappear.

Being impotent is not the same thing as not having any sexual interest. Relatively young diabetic men may be impotent because of damage to the nerves that control the mechanical aspects of sex. But that same man can be emotionally aroused and even have an orgasm.

Some older men have vascular disease that affects mechanical reaction but the desire may still be there. To give you more information on impotence I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-12, Impotence. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. You may be surprised to learn that men who live in good health into their 90s still have sexual interest and some are still capable of sex relations in the conventional sense.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I just can't get the courage to ask my family doctor, but I need advice. What should a man do when he and his wife both have had a very strong sex drive all their lives and now she absolutely refuses sex. She started acting like this after a D and C to stop bleeding.

My teen-age daughter is driving me up the wall, encouraging me to give her sexual response. She claims many of her school friends do it at home, why not us?

Is there any physical wrong with this type of relationship? How long can a man hold his composure under this sort of pressure?

DEAR READER — You need to be very firm with your daughter. In fact all three of you need professional help. I appreciate your reluctance to talk to your family doctor but perhaps you could tell him that you and your wife need family counseling and that you would like to have the whole family see a psychiatrist.

Your daughter is not correct in saying that relations between father and daughter are that common. The long-term effects on the daughter psychologically can be very bad.

The situation you describe suggests that all three of you have played a role in the situation that has come about. Your wife is not behaving normally, nor is she fulfilling the role of a wife. The reason may be related to you or she may have more basic problems.

So my advice is for all of you to see a psychiatrist. If you can't manage that easily I think you should go yourself and in the course of the interview perhaps you can get some help in finding out how to get assistance for all three.

Dr. Lamb will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

Astrographs

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Friday, July 8, 1977
Your Birthday, July 8, 1977

You should experience a lessening of responsibility this coming year. Some of the crosses you've borne could be transformed into crowns.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Intuition is likely to be more reliable than your intellect today. This is a time to depend on your hunches rather than logic. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This should be a pleasant day to hobnob with friends. One word of caution — overlook their minor failings if you want harmony.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A sudden and fortunate shift occurs for you financially today. Lady Luck is taking a personal interest. The returns could be surprising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Trading on your experience is far more valuable than advice from others today. Use techniques that have proven successful in similar situations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't short-change the people you are working for today. Put forth your best effort. A good job promises a commensurate return.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Partners will be lucky for you today, but not in adding to your resources. In this area they could even cost you a few coppers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19) You have the ability to keep things in proper perspective today. Little problems that break up others won't even faze you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Early today you tend to buck city hall and do things the hard way. Later you'll relax. That's when things begin to go your way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today's the day to provide a small luxury that will please a family member. If the cost dents the budget, the appreciation is worth it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your smaller projects may bomb out today. Don't despair. Your fortune lies in greater things. Direct your efforts towards them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If there is something substantial at stake for you today don't allow yourself to get caught up in petty details. It could stall your momentum.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The magnanimous gesture scores for you today with people you want to reach. Pick up the tab first, even though your heart's not in it.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Back in 1933 the bridge establishment was surprised when an unknown pair from the South won the national mixed pairs. That pair was the late Fred Levy of Montgomery and Margaret Wagar of Atlanta.

Mrs. Wagar, or Maggie as her friends call her, went on to win some 25 women's and mixed national titles, plus one Springold Cup and two open pairs. She stands second only to the late Helen Sobel Smith among players of the fair sex.

Here is one of the hands that helped her back in 1933. Fred opened the king of diamonds. After looking at dummy Maggie dropped the eight. Fred continued with the queen and she dropped the deuce. The ace went through also and when everyone followed Fred paused to consider the whole hand.

It wasn't much of a problem. Maggie had signalled come-on with three small. She couldn't have a possible trick in clubs or hearts. Maybe she just might hold king-10 of trumps. Fred led his fourth diamond and there was no way to keep Maggie from making a trump trick.

Ask the Jacobys

A North Dakota reader wants us to give an opinion on the merit of a two-club bid by South holding:

♠xxx ♥xxx ♦A Kx ♣A Kxx

South is vulnerable and East has opened the bidding with one spade.

We have a decided opinion. The bid is a very bad one and just asks for trouble. South can take four tricks with clubs as trump and probably the same four tricks on defense. He should pass.

Info freedom brings headaches to business, public, government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal Freedom of Information Act is causing a major headache for government agencies that are trying to decide what information they are free to disclose.

There is a headache, too, for businesses, which sometimes discover the federal government is releasing to competitors information the businesses thought was confidential.

Officials estimate there are thousands of government bureaucrats engaged each day in processing requests for information under the act, passed by Congress in 1966 and amended in 1975.

Most requests are handled routinely, but some, especially requests involving businesses, end up in the courts.

The Justice Department has 10 full-time attorneys engaged solely in litigating Freedom of Information Act and related cases, and an 11th is being hired.

The cases include about 100 suits by firms seeking to prevent the government from disclosing information. About 200 more suits are by companies that want to force the government to disclose information.

There are hundreds of other cases involving other non-business claims for information.

The Freedom of Information Act has a specific prohibition against releasing "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential."

But problems arise because it sometimes is difficult to draw the line precisely between what is a trade secret and what is not.

"I don't know of any case where hard-core trade secrets are at issue," said Jeffrey Axelrad, chief of the information and privacy section of the Justice Department.

One pending case involves attempts to force disclosure of Arab countries' past efforts to make U.S. businesses comply with the trade boycott against Israel.

Although the Commerce Department began making available current boycott reports late last year, it has declined to release past reports, contending that businesses that filed them understood at the time that they would be kept confidential.

Axelrad indicated the government is less than sympathetic with some attempts by companies to keep information out of the hands of competitors and the public.

For example, he said there have been a number of challenges, some successful, of the government's willingness to release so-called "affirmative acion" plans of businesses.

In order to qualify for government contracts, businesses over a certain size must document how they are going to comply with federal equal opportunity laws on hiring minority workers.

Axelrad says such plans should be public to show that government contractors are complying with the law and to help enforce the law.

But the government lost a case involving an affirmative action plan of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. Westinghouse successfully argued that the plan was a trade secret and exempt from release.

Axelrad said other courts have ruled in the government's favor in similar cases, and so a final determination has not been made on whether an affirmative action plan is exempt. "I don't consider it a hard-core trade secret, or even a soft-core trade secret," he said.

Another area where the government is sometimes challenged, he said, is in the release of financial reports from persons who obtain subsidized financing for housing projects from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

He said HUD wants to release the reports, since tenants of housing projects can use them to determine if the rents they pay are fair.

Axelrad also said there are a "fair amount" of cases where businesses are seeking information about competitors. Since the government must make a decision on each request, it tries to notify one company that another firm is asking for information, he said.

If the company doesn't object to giving out the information, the government likely will make it available. If it does object, then the government may ask it to give specific reasons.

A general objection that information is confidential or a trade secret, without details, is usually disallowed by courts, he said.

But Axelrad said a blanket exemption to the Freedom of Information Act is given to technical proposals businesses submit for the design of a particular product for the government, although some of the "puffery" in such proposals might be released.

"The hard-core parts of technical proposals are protected," Axelrad said. "The government interest is in accurate and complete information, and we don't want to dry it up."

But Axelrad anticipates there will be a great deal more litigation and headaches for everyone before "one definitive principle" emerges that can apply across the board in all cases.

Will Crazy Horse' statue ever be done?

Black Hills artist has spent more than 30 years, $2.5 million on monumental Indian project

ARTIST KORCZAK ZIOLKOWSKI

CUSTER, S.D. (AP) — He's still blasting, drilling, hammering at Thunderhead Mountain even though some say Korczak Ziolkowski never will finish his gigantic carving of Sioux Indian leader Crazy Horse.

"I want to do this because I want to do this," says Ziolkowski, who worked on the presidential heads of Mt. Rushmore, only 20 miles away. "I made a promise to those old Indian chiefs. I want to keep that promise."

It has taken Ziolkowski, 68, nearly 30 years just to outline the arm of Crazy Horse in the granite of Thunderhead Mountain in the Black Hills.

"I envisioned something 100 feet high," he said. "I didn't have any conception it was going to be this enormous."

He estimates that 4,000 persons could stand on Crazy Horse's outstretched arm, and a 10-story building could fit in the opening under the arm. The work stands 563 feet high and will be 641 feet long when completed.

Ziolkowski, who worked with sculptor Gutzon Borglum at the Mt. Rushmore site, says he has detailed plans others can follow if he is unable to finish the carving of Crazy Horse.

"How many people ever have tried to do this?" Ziolkowski asks those who view the mountain. Tourists, reporters, dignitaries and friends have come to watch him work or to help set off dynamite blasts in the rock.

Ziolkowski appears rough, like the rock he is shaping. The years of work on the mountain have taken their toll in the form of a bad back, arthritis, a torn tendon and loss of hearing.

Dressed in a fringed jacket, jeans and boots, the sculptor talks with an accent that hints of Boston, where he was born.

Ziolkowski was already a well-known artist when he came to the Black Hills in 1939. His bust of Polish pianist Paderewski had won honors at the New York World's Fair.

It was through that work he became acquainted with Henry Standing Bear of Pine Ridge.

Standing Bear asked him to carve a memorial to an Indian leader. Other Indian leaders chose Crazy Horse.

"I kept saying, 'Let's go to Wyoming, let's go to the Tetons.' Standing Bear said, 'No,'" Ziolkowski recalled.

Less than a mile from Thunderhead Mountain is a visitors' observation point which also serves as home and studio for Ziolkowski.

Nearly 60 rooms house antiques, Indian artifacts, carvings and newspaper clippings about the Crazy Horse sculpture.

News to use

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is giving the public more time to comment on its proposed ban on saccharin because of two recent studies on the artificial sweetener.

The new deadline for comment on the ban, proposed in April, is Aug. 31. Interested persons should write to the Hearing Clerk (HFC-20), Food and Drug Administration, Room 4-65, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md., 20857.

The FDA said one study, examining smoking, occupational exposure and other factors, produced limited data which "have been described as suggesting no positive association between bladder cancer and saccharin use."

The agency said, however, that the second study of 600 individuals with bladder cancer and an equal number without the disease "reports a positive dose-and duration-related correlation between saccharin use and bladder cancer in human males."

"This study in particular has renewed and heightened the commissioner's concern about the safety of long-term saccharin consumption," the FDA said.

The plan being considered by FDA would ban the use of saccharin in food for humans and animals and eliminate saccharin from all cosmetics, most human drugs and all animal drugs. It would permit the sale of saccharin as a non-prescription drug.

HIGHER POSTAGE RATE — Starting Wednesday it will cost more to mail books and sheet music to Central and South America and Spain.

The rate for a pound of printed matter being sent to Mexico and the Postal Union of the Americas and Spain is being increased from 26 cents to 30 cents.

A similar increase in second, third and fourth class postage rates within the United States was recently announced.

NO MORE HEXACHLOROPHENE FOR PETS — The Food and Drug Administration is limiting the use of hexachlorophene in products intended for animal use.

The human use of hexachlorophene to kill bacteria was strictly limited following an accident in France in which several babies were powdered with high concentrations of the toxic chemical.

FDA officials said hexachlorophene is still used in some animal products including shampoos. A spokesman said a person using such a shampoo on his pet occasionally would not be harmed, but someone in constant contact with the product — washing several animals a day — could face danger.

Effective Aug. 1 animal products containing hexachlorophene will not be permitted unless an application has been filed showing the safety of the product or unless there is 0.1 per cent hexachlorophene or less used as a preservative.

Products now on the market will have to have an application filed showing their safety by Sept. 29, or will have to be reformulated.

Their bread is weighty problem

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — A Great Falls couple whose baking firm labeled its bread in grams and kilograms instead of pounds has wound up in court because a competitor complained to a state agency.

A hearing will be held Wednesday to determine whether a temporary restraining order forbidding Peter and Laura Wakeman from labeling their bread metrically should be kept in force.

The order was issued last week by District Court Judge Truman Bradford against the Wakemans' Great Harvest Bread Co. at the request of Gary Delano, administrator of the Weights and Measures Division of the state Department of Business Regulation.

Delano says he's in an awkward position because he is a member of a national committee studying the metric system and he supports its use in the United States.

But he says he sought the court order because Great Harvest Bread Co. was not complying with state law.

A 1969 Montana law made the metric system legal for all forms of commerce. But another 1969 law required bread to be produced in loaves weighing multiples of a pound, Delano explained.

The Wakemans said it would cost their small company $1,000 or more to take their case to court, so they will label the bread in pounds, even though their loaves weigh more than the labels say.

Matchmaker get me sole

SANTA MONICA (AP) — If an award were given for Matchmaker of the Year, Ruth Rubin Feldman would be a shoe-in. But Mrs. Feldman deals in soles rather than hearts.

Thirty-seven years ago, Mrs. Feldman decided to help people like herself who have feet of different sizes. She formed the National Odd Shoe Exchange — NOSE — to acquaint people who otherwise would have to buy two pairs of the same shoe style.

"That is the way it was for me when I was growing up in St. Louis," said Mrs. Feldman. "Because I had polio, my left foot was smaller than my right by a size and a half."

The local polio society helped Mrs. Feldman organize NOSE.

For a $5 charge to pay for the paperwork, a subscriber's name and shoe sizes go into Mrs. Feldman's files and the person is sent a list of subscribers throughout the world.

Moxabustion

Moxabustion is the practice of placing little combustible cones of dried wormwood leaves (Artemisia moxa) on certain spots on the body and burning them down to the skin. This practice, related to acupuncture, originated in China and is still used in Chinese and Japanese medicine.

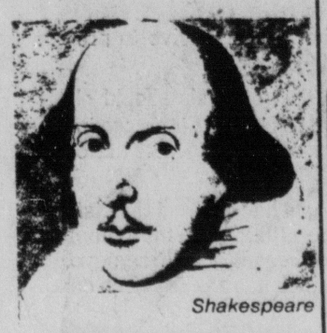
What's up in advice



Shakespeare

Nothing much, actually. What Polonius said to his son Laertes is good enough.

1. Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
2. Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel.
3. Beware of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in, beat it that the opposed be aware of thee.
4. Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice.
5. Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
6. Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, but not expressed in fancy: rich, not gaudy, for the apparel oft proclaims the man.
7. Neither a borrower nor a lender be; for loan oft loses both itself and friend.
8. This above all: to thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man.

UC studies connection to nuclear laboratories

BERKELEY (AP) — The University of California has named a committee to review its relationship with nuclear weapons laboratories at Los Alamos, N.M., and Livermore.

The two labs, run by UC under contract with the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration, design the nation's new atomic weapons. They also conduct non-nuclear research.

The university signed a renewed five-year contract with ERDA this year amid protests by peace groups including students and teachers who wanted the labs converted to non-weapons work.

UC officials have defended the contracts, saying they serve the national interest as defined by the President and Congress. They also say ERDA would find a private contractor if UC refused to do weapons work.

UC President David Saxon said he appointed the committee last week "to consider, from the university's perspectives and in terms of the university's own welfare, if and under what circumstances it is appropriate for the university to consider managing these laboratories."

The eight-member committee is headed by UCLA executive vice chancellor William Gerberding. It includes one student, Berkeley student body president Trudy Martin; one executive from each laboratory, and four teachers.

Among the teachers is UC San Diego physics Prof. Herbert York, who was director of defense research and engineering in the Eisenhower administration, an arms control adviser to three presidents, and a leading spokesman for disarmament in the 1960s.

Saxon recommended that the committee consider holding public hearings, and said he hoped a report would be presented by Dec. 1.

Watson returns to county post

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County Assessor Philip E. Watson has returned to work for the first time since he underwent heart surgery.

Before his return Tuesday, Watson filed for workers' compensation benefits on grounds that job-related stress caused the heart condition that resulted in surgery last February.

Insurance jump of 72% hits Chaffey district hard

Chaffey school trustees have found out that the district's liability insurance premium is going up a whopping 72 per cent.

The district will be paying $257,504 for the insurance against accidents on school grounds this year, as compared to the $149,802 it paid during 1976-77.

Russell Dickinson, assistant superintendent for business, told board members that Maryland Casualty Insurance Co. had dropped its insurance with the district, and school officials had contracted with Firemen's Fund for this year.

Actually, the insurance has gone up 477 per cent over the 1975-76 premium of $44,600, said Dickinson.

Trustees expressed concern over the skyrocketing rates and agreed that administrators should investigate other insurance alternatives. One of those is self-insurance, Dickinson explained.

By self-insuring, it could be less expensive to provide the liability insurance, he added.

Board members indicated that officials should check all possibilities of avoiding the 72 per cent increase in the Firemen's Fund policy. They took no immediate action to change the policy, however.

Dickinson said Firemen's Fund has ordered the district to make various "safety corrections," or the company would drop the insurance. One precaution is to remove all trampolines from schools — which has already been done, said Dickinson.

471-pound hero finds it's difficult to hide even if he wants to SOUTHGATE, Mich. (AP) — It's difficult to hide when you weigh 471 pounds. Especially after you've saved a child's life.

James Alameida, a truck driver from Fort Wayne, Ind., spotted 9-year-old Michael Thomalson when the youngster, frightened by an oncoming dump truck, froze in his tracks in the middle of Toledo Road here Wednesday night. The boy's father was waiting for his son on the other side of the street.

Alameida, who drives for North American Van Lines, swept the boy to safety. He identified himself to the father only as "Big Jim."

But after the father told reporters what had happened, employes at a motel where Alameida was staying identified him. They said they wanted to see Big Jim get proper credit.

SEN. JOHN BRIGGS, a Fullerton Republican, has heard the bell and come out swinging.

As the self-claimed "first" to formally announce for Governor in 1978, he's come out on the attack.

"I'm running," he said in Pomona Tuesday, "because California needs a governor. A governor in word, deed, thought and action.

"The man we've got in office now (Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.) is to blame for the fact that we have a housing shortage, unemployment and no opportunity in California."

In his full-steam-ahead campaign, Briggs joins an already crowded field. Others identified publicly as gubernatorial candidates are state Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger, Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson.

Briggs, however, is undaunted. He's going to take his campaign to the people. "We'll get the death penalty back on the ballot through the initiative process. We'll also get the matter of removing homosexuals from our schools on the ballot the same way. I know my bill will never make it."

Briggs on June 14 introduced a bill to ban homosexuals from classrooms in public schools. It is not expected to go to committee until August.

Briggs, 47, is an 11-year veteran in the legislature. He served in the Assembly before being elected to the Senate in 1976. He is an Air Force veteran, married with two grown sons and a grown daughter.

"I want to be governor," he said. "I want to be the unofficial president of the Chamber of Commerce for the state of California.

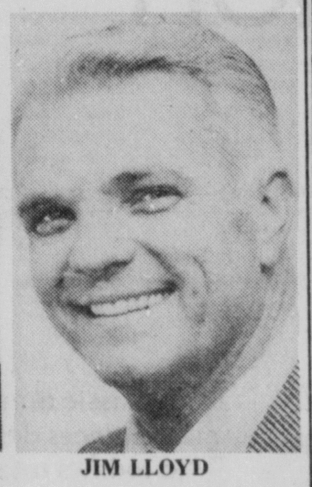
"This is the way to go about providing new jobs, creating a good business climate, building homes so young people can buy what they need.

"Our present governor has shut down the housing industry, shut down the building of freeways and shut down business opportunities."

Briggs said if these mistakes aren't rectified, "you're going to run people out of California."

Governor Brown, he continued, "thinks big is bad and small is beautiful. I disagree. We must have growth and expansion if we are to survive."

JOHN BRIGGS



JIM LLOYD

REP. JIM LLOYD, D-35th Dist., met Friday with President Carter to discuss his recent fact-finding trip to Israel and the Paris Air Show.

Lloyd attended a working luncheon at the White House by special invitation of the President and Bob S. Bergland, Secretary of Agriculture.

Topics discussed were reorganization of the food stamp program, the California drought, and the export and marketing of U. S. commodities in foreign markets with an emphasis on citrus and grain.

Bergland told Lloyd he anticipates major reorganization of the food stamp program in order to reduce fraud. He said his plan will eliminate 2½ million food stamp users.

LLOYD, at another meeting with President Carter in the Oval Office of the White House, discussed Carter's decision on the B-1 bomber and his upcoming meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Mendachem Begin.

Lloyd told the President of his recent flight with the Israeli Air Force in a French-built Mirage and attitudes of the Israeli armed services personnel.

President Carter told Lloyd he was looking forward to his July 19 meeting with Begin.

SEN. ALAN CRANSTON, D-California, said he disagreed with and was disappointed by President Carter's decision not to proceed with the B-1 bomber.

"I believe we should proceed with the B-1 while at the same time seek a comprehensive arms control agreement with the Soviets which, hopefully, will one day allow both nations to cut back on all strategic weapons systems," said Cranston.

Person-to-person

NEAL COBLE, president-elect of the Greater Pomona Kiwanis Club, was one of 15,000 people attending the 62nd annual convention of the Kiwanis International at Dallas, Tex., June 26-29.

The convention acted on the resolutions upon which the organization's 1977-78 community service programs will be built. The motto "We Build" exemplifies the purposes of the worldwide men's service organization, which has nearly 300,000 members in 56 nations. The Kiwanis International Decency Award was presented to Roy Rogers and Dale Evans.

The Greater Pomona Kiwanis Club meets every Wednesday, 7:30 a.m., in the Palomares Room at Buffum's. Membership is open to professional and businessmen in the greater Pomona Valley.

Coble, finance director for the California Credit Union League, lives in Claremont with his wife Shirley and their two children.

What's going on around here

An apparent low bid of $171,949 has been turned in by Kruse Construction Co. of Sun Valley for construction of a series of equestrian ramps in the LA VERNE-SAN DIMAS area, Supervisor Pete Schabarum said.

The offer was the lowest of four submitted to County Flood Control District Chief Engineer A.E. Bruington.

Schabarum said all bids will be checked by district engineers, who will investigate the safety record of the bidder. The Board of Supervisors is expected to award a contract in about ten days.

The project will extend from the confluence of Live Oak and Marshall Canyon channels in San Dimas to a point approximately two miles north in Marshall Canyon channel in La Verne. Construction of five access ramps will permit equestrians to use the channel invert as a trail, passing under busy vehicular roads. Also included in the project is an equestrian bridge, some additional protective fencing and minor grading to promote safer use of the facility.

Plans for the project were prepared by the Flood Control District, which will also supervise construction. Maintenance and operation of the equestrian trail will be a responsibility of the county Parks and Recreation Department, which is participating with the Flood Control District in providing funds necessary to offset construction costs.

Work will start in August and take about two months to complete.

The LA VERNE RECREATION DEPARTMENT will sponsor a trip for senior citizens to Las Vegas on July 19, 20, 21.

Transportation is on an airconditioned bus. Pick-up time will be at 7 a.m. at the corner of Third and D streets, on July 19, 1977.

The price is $41.50 per person, which includes two nights and three days at the Fremont Hotel in downtown Las Vegas.

For registration call Mary Nicolleta at 596-1391.

The CLAREMONT COLLEGIATE SCHOOL SPANISH class has returned from a two-week tour through Mexico.

The trip was organized by Karen Torjesen, teacher of the second-year Spanish class. Participating students were Jenny Barnes, Henry Barnes, Scott Norris, Fred Sharp and Meg Verrees. Phil Wittman, the American History teacher, and Christopher Chippendale, who teaches Oriental brush painting, accompanied the group.

The public is invited to a free four-hour class in CARDIOPULMONARY RESUSCITATION (CRP) at Park Avenue Hospital July 13 and 20.

The "Heartsaver" course is sponsored by the American Heart Association and will be given in two sessions, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. each Wednesday at the hospital, 1225 N. Park Ave., Pomona.

Participants may register at the first class.

Beauty pageant

The first Miss Pomona Valley Liberty beauty pageant will be held July 24 at Griswold's in Claremont.

Girls and boys from 3 to 11 years of age and girls from 12 to 23 are eligible to compete for crowns, trophies and ribbons.

Judging will be based on poise, personality, beauty, handsomeness and interviews. The top winner in each of six divisions will compete in California finals in August.

The program is sponsored by the National Freedom's Foundation Miss Liberty USA Pageant.

Applications may be obtained by pageant director Lyle A. Spilman Jr., 3052 N. Richwood Ave., El Monte. His telephone number is 213 442-4741.

Cat show

Chocolate, seal, blue and lilac will be the colors and Siamese will be the breed of cat shown Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Taylor Hall in Claremont.

"Oriental Holiday" is the theme of the Siamese Cat Fanciers Show, which will feature Thai dancers, gourmet Oriental cooking and a special feature entitled "Temple Guards" which will include top winning Siamese from across the nation.

Among the judges will be Marge Naples, a well-known authority on the Siamese cat and the author of the book, "This is the Siamese Cat."

POP GOES THE AIR BAG — Three-year-old Shelby Sutcliffe reacts as an air bag pops from the steering wheel of a simulator. Standing over the girl is consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

'Freedom of choice to die . . .'

Blowup over air bags in autos

The Carter administration's decision to require air bags in most 1982 model cars is getting mixed reviews on Capitol Hill.

While a Pennsylvania congressman was criticizing the proposal, a newly former Ralph Nader consumer group was voicing guarded approval of it.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams last week ordered passive-restraint systems for all standard and luxury cars sold in the United States starting with 1982 models. Although this system could include a seat-belt harness that automatically covers the driver and passenger, the air bag is the most commonly discussed method.

On Capitol Hill, however, Rep. Bud Shuster, a third-term Republican, said he has introduced legislation to block the order. The air bags order will stand unless Congress acts within 60 days to overturn it.

Shuster said the proposal represents another government infringement on individual freedoms.

It's "a very small piece of a much larger dark and heavy blanket being lowered over a free people by their paternalistic government," he said. "Free people should have a choice. Anybody who doesn't wear one is a dummy. But free people have a right to do dumb things."

While Shuster was promising a congressional battle to head off mandatory passive restraints, Nader was predicting the order will survive a congressional assault.

Nader, who believes the Carter administration has moved too slowly on passive-restraint systems, said there is wide support against those who "believe Americans have a right to die in their cars ..."

At a news conference sponsored by a new lobbying group called the National Committee for Automobile Crash Protection, he said the administration's delay in implementing the order is "quite a mouthful to have to swallow," especially since the U.S. auto industry could have installed air bags in 1973 models.

But, Nader added, the Adams order is "all we've got right now." Some opponents of the air bags contend the devices are so clumsy they could worsen injuries caused in an accident.

In an effort to disprove that argument, Lynn Sutcliffe, lawyer for the lobbying coalition, placed his 3-year-old daughter, Shelby, in the front seat of a simulated car and threw a switch, inflating the white air bag in the face of the child. She giggled and walked away.

Department has estimated that passive restraints could save 9,000 to 12,000 lives each year and prevent 100,000 to 200,000 serious injuries.

The air bag, which would cost $100 to $300 per car, is a balloon that inflates automatically when sensors detect a collision, keeping riders from slamming into the windshield, dashboard and steering wheel.

Man convicted of killing girl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An 18-year-old Van Nuys man has been found guilty of first degree murder in the rape and murder of a Reseda High School girl last September.

A Superior Court jury decided Tuesday that Philip Guy Stephens had killed Mary Ann Henderson, 15.

Solar energy ready to compete by 1980, federal study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Solar energy may be able to compete with electricity in producing heat and hot water for large commercial and residential buildings as early as 1980, a new congressional study says.

The report by the Office of Technology Assessment, published Tuesday, suggests that Congress consider policies beyond what the Carter administration is endorsing to encourage development of large solar power units.

The study says rising electricity costs and falling solar equipment expenses may make even small solar electricity units economically competitive with conventional power plants.

But most buildings still would need a back-up conventional power system, the study says, adding that solar energy cannot compete with coal in industrial use for at least the next 20 years.

The study, nearly 1,000 pages long, was based on computer comparisons of solar energy devices with electric or natural gas systems.

It suggests that private homes can use the sun's rays to provide hot water and, perhaps, space heating, and adds that office and apartment buildings or hotels may find it even more financially attractive to turn to solar heating and hot water.

Even solar air conditioning may be feasible, perhaps by roofing over parking lots with solar energy collectors and burying heat-storing water tanks beneath the lots, the study says.

Heat collected by simple solar panels could be circulated through coils for direct heating, or used to drive devices called "heat pumps" that can be reversed to provide air conditioning.

If the federal Energy Research and Development Administration can meet its 1985 goal of reducing the cost of solar-electric cells by almost 97 per cent, the report says, it may become economical to generate electricity directly from sunlight, using crystal panels something like those that have helped power manned spacecraft and communications satellites.

Only the new, cheaper solar panels would be reasonable for private homes and other buildings that use relatively little electricity.

The report says increased use of solar energy would mean a cleaner environment and would increase employment, particularly in the building trades and in the manufacturing and maintenance of solar equipment.

DEATH CAR — Two children, ages 5 and 6, burned to death in this compact auto Wednesday in Oklahoma City shortly after it was stolen and set afire. Police said the children were asleep in the car when the theft occurred while their father was making deliveries at an apartment complex.

Welfare errors reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says progress is being made in reducing the number of errors made in disbursing welfare benefits through the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

The error rate for the AFDC program dropped by 2.7 per cent from July to December 1976, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Tuesday. In that period, it said, errors dropped from 26 per cent of the cases to 23.3 per cent.

The money misspent through errors dropped 7 per cent, from $457.5 million in the first half of 1976 to $423.4 million in the last half.

HEW said the improvement in AFDC performance continues a trend that started in January 1974, when the federal government and states began a campaign to reduce the error rate.

The department said the three-year rate has resulted in a 48.5 per cent cut in payment error rates for AFDC, one of the largest welfare programs.

Total AFDC costs are estimated at $9.9 billion in fiscal 1977. The federal government pays 55 per cent of all AFDC costs and state and local governments, which administer the program, pick up the rest.

Of the 11.2 million AFDC recipients, 7.9 million are children, 2.8 million are mothers and 505,000 are fathers or other adult guardians.

Production of missile ends soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of the Minuteman III intercontinental ballistic missile will end when 10 missiles authorized two months ago are built, the Pentagon says.

Officials said that Defense Secretary Harold Brown issued orders shutting down the production line.

The move apparently is a follow-up to President Carter's decision to ask Congress to divert funds from procurement of additional missiles to production of components to maintain the existing force of 550 weapons.

Carter's decision was aimed at reversing approval by Congress last year of $260.7 million for production of an additional 60 Minuteman IIIs at the rate of five a month.

Production of new Minuteman IIIs had been scheduled to end about

Effect of neutron bomb in arms race debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Arms Control and Disarmament Agency is telling the White House that production of a new neutron bomb could have mixed effects on President Carter's stated aim of ending the nuclear arms race.

Officials of the agency say their view was conveyed to the White House and the National Security Council in "an impact statement" requested by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.

Under federal law congressmen can ask the agency for periodic impact statements when the executive branch begins to research, develop and deploy a new weapons system. This is the first time the Carter administration has received such an assessment from the agency.

Officials familiar with the contents of the statement said it describes the implications of projected manufacture of the neutron bomb, but makes no recommendation on whether it should be deployed.

The bomb would be a nuclear warhead with a capacity to kill people when it detonated, but would leave buildings unharmed.

Deaths would come from the bomb's intense radiation. For 20 years, proponents of the neutron bomb have argued for its use as a tactical weapon.

Sources said that factors considered in appraising the arguments for and against the deployment of the bombs include:

—The effect on current U.S.-Soviet-British moves to negotiate a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty that would outlaw test firing of nuclear weapons underground. The agency view is that research on the neutron bomb has been completed, development is virtually finished and a test firing could comfortably be carried out well before any test ban treaty is signed.

—The effect on current U.S.-Soviet negotiations for a strategic arms limitation treaty. According to the agency, the effect would not necessarily be negative. The reason given was that the neutron bomb would not in itself change the strategic balance between the two countries.

—The effect on Carter's overall pledge to work for the elimination of all nuclear weapons. The agency concedes this impact would, however, be questionable.

The Senate met last week in an unusual closed session for a debate on the question of deployment of the bomb. Afterwards, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., predicted the Senate eventually would approve money for the bomb, but give Congress veto power over any presidential decision to use it.

Debate on the new weapon is expected to continue when Congress returns next week after its July 4th recess.

France, W. Germany in accord on nuclear reactor development

PARIS (AP) — France and West Germany have agreed to cooperate in the development and sale of fast breeder nuclear reactors despite U.S. opposition because such reactors produce plutonium that can be used for nuclear bombs.

The agreements were signed Tuesday after 2½ years of negotiations and research on the reactors, which will produce more atomic fuel than they consume.

President Carter has called for a worldwide delay in developing fast breeder technology, saying the plants would turn out large quantities of materials that might be used to make atomic bombs. Carter has delayed construction of the first U.S. fast breeder reactor, the $2-billion Clinch River reactor near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

But French officials said last week that Europe has a lead over the United States in the field and plans to hang onto it. The French officials added that they were all for nuclear nonproliferation and would take all measures necessary to make sure plutonium from the plants isn't used for warheads.

One agreement calls for the French Atomic Energy Agency, the West German agency Interatom and the German nuclear research organization at Karlsruhe to cooperate in developing the plants.

A second agreement provides for establishment of a French-German concern, known as Serena, which will have exclusive world rights to sell and license the reactors.

The French-German accord is expected to be discussed when Carter meets in Washington with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on July 13-14. Schmidt leaves Bonn today for a seven-day visit to Canada before going on to Washington.

Both the Ford and Carter administrations tried without success to get the West German government to cancel an agreement to sell Brazil, as part of $4.8 billion nuclear power complex, a plant for the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel. The U.S. government is opposed to the reprocessing plant because it produces plutonium as a by-product.

In a move to appease Washington and to improve the climate for Schmidt's visit, the West German goverment said last week that it would refrain "for the time being" from new deals to sell reprocessing equipment. U.S. diplomats said their government regarded this as "a step in the right direction."

Shooting is no joke

LOS ANGELES (AP) —What was first thought to be a bizarre Independence Day joke ended with a 72-year-old man being booked for investigation of attempted murder.

Osualds Dambitas, a regular parisioner of the First United Methodist Church, flagged down police after Sunday's service, and showed them an automatic pistol he said he had just used "to shoot a preacher."

Police were skeptical and so was the intended victim, the Rev. Don R. Boyd. He told police he was standing behind the prayer railing, shaking hands with members of the congregation when Dambitas walked up, drew the pistol and fired. Boyd, who wasn't hit, told police he assumed it was a joke and that Dambitas was firing blanks.

But police found the a bullet embedded in the railing and arrested Dambitas.

GROUP JUMP — Not only were these kids cooled in the traditional sense when they hit the waters of Wilknet Creek Park in Toronto recently, but they were also "frozen" by a fast shutter speed to form a kind of still-life photo of skin, hands and happy faces.

TRIAL BEGINS — Mrs. Victoria Price Street is aided from her car to the federal courthouse in Winchester, Tenn., by her attorney Raymond W. Fraley as her husband lifts satchels of legal papers. Mrs. Street is suing the NBC television network for $6 million over the TV production, "Judge Horton and the Scotsboro Boys."

Secret recipe for caramel corn goes with it

108-year-old candy store for sale

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — "Gran'pa's" caramel corn had such appeal that a chauffeured Rolls Royce from Indianapolis drove to this nearby town three times a year so its passenger could indulge his craving.

But "Gran'pa's Popcorn and Candy Store" — a business 108 years old — is for sale, along with the patented caramel corn recipe that kept three generations of munchers happy.

George Cullen and his wife, Lora Jane, both 65, closed their shop in December after 22 years.

"It's very simple," Cullen said of his decision to sell the store that once boasted 74 varieties of homemade candy. "The wife and I were getting too old to handle it."

Cullen said they want to find someone to breathe new life in the business started in 1869 by his grandfather, a Civil War veteran.

There was one inquiry after a story about the closing appeared in the local newspaper.

"The very first call we had was from a little 6-year-old boy," said Mrs. Cullen with a chuckle. "He said he wanted to buy it."

They would have preferred to keep the business in the family, Cullen explains, but the couple's two daughters have chosen careers in music and the law.

The caramel corn recipe has been a family secret since his grandfather opened his first candy stand in a hotel on the courthouse square, but even Cullen doesn't know where his grandfather got it.

The sweet result was good enough to make "Gran'pa's" a staple at county and state fairs, while creating a loyal following from coast to coast.

"During World War II, it went all over the world," Cullen recalls. Family members also set up candy stores in other central Indiana communities, but "Gran'pa's" was the last survivor.

But what made "Gran'pa's" caramel corn so special?

"I would say it's the formula," says Cullen. "I wouldn't single out any one element in it — it's really a delicacy."

And although he doesn't know where "Gran'pa" got his recipe, Cullen intends to keep using it to make up the occasional batch of caramel corn for the family.

"And I eat it myself," he says.

Librarian for Ford papers named

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential papers of Gerald R. Ford apparently will be available to the public long before those of Richard M. Nixon.

A librarian has been named to begin preparing for release of Ford's papers, while Nixon and the government continued to wage a legal battle over ownership of his papers and White House tapes.

The job of preparing Ford's papers for public release will be supervised by William J. Stewart, assistant director at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, N.Y.

Stewart's appointment was announced by James B. Rhoads, archivist of the United States. Stewart, who has been with the National Archives since 1960, will direct a 14-member staff working to catalog and open the Ford papers to researchers. The National Archives is a branch of the General Services Administration.

Ford donated his papers and other historical materials to the federal government just before leaving office. There are about 20 million pages documenting Ford's life as congressman, vice president and president.

By contrast, Nixon's presidential papers alone total 42 million pages and there are, in addition, 880 tape reels containing roughly 5,000 hours of conversation.

The ownership of the Nixon papers has not been determined, but the Supreme Court ruled last week that the government has custody and control. But the public won't get to see the papers or hear the tapes until other legal problems are resolved.

Access to Ford's papers will be subject only to restrictions of national security, personal privacy and possible damage to living persons.

Ford's papers are temporarily stored in a warehouse in Ann Arbor, Mich., pending permanent relocation in a Ford library to be built on the campus of the University of Michigan, his alma mater. The papers are expected to become available to the public in about three years when the library has been completed.

Fewer flights

There are now about 900 fewer daily flights in the U.S. than there were in 1973, according to the Air Transport Association.

One airline objects

Japanese beetles on airliner; U.S. orders spraying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is ordering planes leaving a Washington airport for California sprayed with DDT after finding live Japanese beetles on board a plane, but one airline says it will fight, not spray.

King Lovinger, an Agriculture Department spokesman, said Tuesday the "routine" spray order was aimed at protecting California's agriculture industry from the beetles.

But United Airlines, citing an Environmental Protection Agency ban on DDT for farm use, has refused to spray its aircraft.

United spokesman James Linse said representatives of his company and two other airlines involved plan to meet today with officials of the Agriculture Department and the Federal Aviation Administration to discuss the spraying program.

"We hope to get total satisfaction that any material that USDA wants us to use in spraying an aircraft is absolutely safe to anyone coming in contact with it," he said. "Nobody has been able to explain so far to us why the EPA has banned it (DDT) but the Agriculture Department gives it to us to use."

Japanese beetles, normally found only in the northeastern part of the country, were discovered on a plane arriving in California last week from Dulles International Airport in suburban Washington.

The insects attack more than 400 kinds of plants and can cause extensive destruction, according to experts.

After authorities in California discovered the beetles last week, the Agriculture Department declared Dulles Airport "hazardous" and ordered the spraying for all planes flying to California.

United Airlines, American Airlines and Trans World Airlines have flights from Dulles to California, an airport official said.

He said the department agreed not to enforce the order against United until the differences could be worked out.

American and TWA officials apparently went along with the order, but spokesmen for the two airlines were not immediately available for comment.

Lovinger said airline officials are mistaken in the impression there has been a total ban on the use of DDT.

"They have banned most uses of DDT but not all uses," he said of the EPA. "The airlines have been instructed not to spray food handling areas and if they're doing it, they're in violation of our instructions."

Five years ago, the EPA banned DDT for nearly all agricultural uses after declaring the chemical posed "an unacceptable risk to man and his environment."

But Lovinger said the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the Agriculture Department was permitted to use ground-up bits of DDT for spraying airplanes when necessary.

Coal industry frets over transportation problems

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's coal industry will be digging at a furious pace to meet President Carter's energy goals, but some producers wonder if the coal can be moved once it's out of the ground.

They're skeptical about the ability of the transportation industry, particularly railroads, to haul their product.

"They can't handle what we've got. What would happen if we really started cranking out the coal," said Horace Van Meter, vice president of operations at Jewell Smokeless Coal in Grundy, W.Va.

Of the 665 million tons of bituminous coal mined last year, railroads carried 66 per cent, or about 440 million tons. The rest was moved by barge or truck or used at mine-mouth generating plants.

As part of his plan to reduce reliance on dwindling supplies of oil and natural gas, Carter wants the coal industry to mine more than one billion tons by 1985. The coal industry has doubts that goal can be met and cites environmental concerns as one of the biggest roadblocks. But presuming the one billion ton goal can be met and assuming the railroads keep their same share of the traffic, they'll be hauling about 725 million tons in eight years. Railroad officials greet the prospect of a coal boom with undisguised glee.

Although the industry has high fixed costs, once those costs are met, profits can be handsome, and coal traffic may well propel the railroads beyond the break-even point.

"The industry is suffering from a Penn Central (bankruptcy) hangover. That's the image," said Dan Lang of the Association of American Railroads (AAR). But he said coal hauling roads are doing well.

Some, such as the Chessie System and the Union Pacific, are money-makers and their roadbed and equipment are in good shape.

But there are also roads like Conrail, the governmentcreated hybrid of six bankrupt Northeastern railroads. Their coffers are empty, their equipment decrepit and their tracks falling apart.

There is also a hopper car shortage, which does little to inspire coal industry confidence in the railroads' ability to meet the energy challenge.

According to Conrail spokesman Tom Hoppin, there is currently an industry-wide shortage of about 4,000 coal cars.

Railroads blame the shortages on peaks and valleys in coal production, saying they can't afford to have cars sitting idle.

But a spokesman for one of the nation's largest coal companies said railroads historically have a poor record of supplying equipment.

"The railroads tell us now that when we increase our production, they can easily increase the car supply because it takes a lot longer to open a mine than it does to build a hopper car. Well, that's the same damn story I've heard for 25 years," he said. To handle the increased coal tonnage, the AAR estimates up to 13,400 hopper cars, which cost about $30,000 each, and 670 locomotives, with a $500,000 price tag, will have to be acquired by 1985. The investment could well range from $4 billion to $6 billion.

The figures sound high, but Lang says they would not be a crushing financial burden. "Rail equipment is a pretty easy thing to borrow money for," he said.

Many railroads are already gearing up for the expected traffic. Chessie, for instance, is planning to acquire 35,000 hopper cars at a cost of $1 billion beginning in 1980. And Conrail, vital to Appalachian coal fields, is in the midst of a $6 billion rehabilitation program.

The potential for a coal-generated boom for the railroads has not been lost on investors.

As of June 10, Wall Street's Value Line ranked western railroads at a sizzling No. 8 out of 90 industries rated. "Western roads are diversified and they have tremendous natural resource holdings along their rights of way," a Value Line spokesman said.

Eastern roads, sensitive to Conrail's difficulties and the volatile coal labor situation in Appalachia, were rated 48th.

Railroads are already facing stiff competition for coal business from builders of coal slurry pipelines, which could move coal — ground to the consistency of sugar and mixed with water — over great distances.

At the moment there is only one slurry system operating in the U.S. — the 273-mile Black Mesa line that has been moving coal for seven years from northern Arizona to a power station in southern Nevada.

But a number of other pipelines are planned, and the most ambitious is a $750 million project by Energy Transportation Systems Inc. (ETSI) that would move 25 million tons of coal a year over 1,036 miles from Wyoming to Arkansas.

Railroads are bitterly opposed to slurry systems, and they have refused to allow proposed pipelines to cross their tracks.

"We think they're unnecessary," said Lang. "They would also skim away the cream of the coal traffic."

Opponents also argue that pipelines would require huge amounts of water in areas that have little water to spare.

But ETSI's Frank Odasz says pipelines would not only be nonpolluting and inconspicuous because they would go underground, they also would be cheaper than railroads because there would be little labor cost.

He says ETSI's pipeline will be able to deliver coal to southern utilities at a 30-year average cost of $7.90 per ton, compared to the railroad's $28.50 per ton.

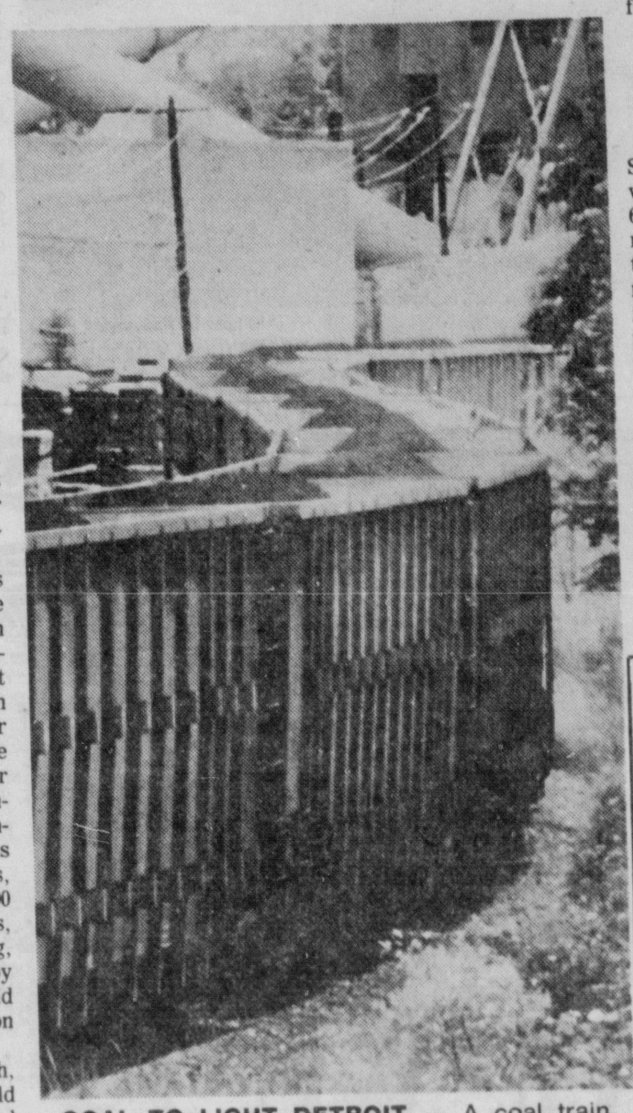
The coal industry understandably favors pipeline development.

"We simply must be able to move coal better, faster and with greater reliability and economy," said National Coal Association President Carl Bagge. "All modes of transport must be improved and new ones, like coal pipelines, must be introduced and used on a broader scale."

Odasz says simply, "We can't afford to put all our transportation eggs in one basket."

That observation is likely to be shared by Congress, which is currently considering a bill that would grant the right of eminent domain to pipeline companies.

President Carter already has said he would sign the measure.



COAL TO LIGHT DETROIT — A coal train winds its way out of a West Virginia coal mine, destined for a power plant in Detroit.

Pay raises noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salaries of white-collar workers rose an average of 6.9 per cent in the 12 months ending last March, the Labor Department reported Friday. The U.S. inflation rate went up 6.4 per cent in the same period.

The department said it was the third biggest salary increase in the 17-year history of its nationwide survey.

Pay raises averaged 6.6 per cent for clerical jobs and 7.1 per cent for professional, administrative and technical occupations between March 1976 and March 1977. Over the same period, consumer prices rose 6.4 per cent.

The information obtained in the salary survey is used in developing recommendations for adjusting pay of white-collar federal employes, whose salaries are required by law to remain comparable with those of private industry.

Pay for clerks rose an average of 6.9 per cent, while that for keypunch operators increased 5.9 per cent and secretaries, 6.4 per cent.

3 'city slicker' priests spread word in sticks

GRIFFITHSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Three Jesuit priests have set up housekeeping in Lincoln County, a previously uncharted territory as far as the Catholic Church is concerned.

In fact, Catholics are about as plentiful as speckled hens' teeth in this particular part of Appalachia.

The first question, then, is fairly obvious. What are three city slicker priests doing in the sticks, far, far from cathedral or college?

"Putting down roots and establishing a Christian community in an area where there's never been a Catholic presence before," said Father Joe Hacala, a tanned young man who came here last fall from Wheeling College. "We're here to see what needs to be done and how we can help do it."

So far, this desire to serve has been translated into a variety of activities. They include such diverse pastimes as coaching a boys' baseball team, joining the Griffithsville Volunteer Fire Department, helping elderly neighbors get to the doctor or to the hospital and becoming involved in a federal court action designed to stop a nearby oil drilling project.

Father Joe Peschel, the volunteer fireman, also drinks a lot of coffee in his pursuit of community service.

"I go down to the local restaurant just about every day," he said in a recent interview. "I just sit around drinking coffee and talking with people ... sort of establishing our presence."

Father Peschel was seated in the livingroom of the old, frame house where he has been conducting a weekly Mass since last October. The service is rather informal, with Father Peschel usually clad in blue jeans and few, if any, of the celebrants active Catholics.

"We had about 15 persons at the first Mass," he said. "There was one family of Catholics and several Christians looking for an alternative to the fundamentalist churches in the area. About 35 persons attended our last Mass, that was our biggest crowd. Now that summer's here, we'll be conducting Mass in various homes around the area."

The Jesuits came to Lincoln County as the result of the order's worldwide meeting in Rome last year.

"The Jesuits decided to change their corporate goals in 1976," said Father Peschel, a Chicagoan who at the time was studying theology in Rome.

"Yes," said Father Hacala, "the Jesuits have never had much of a rural ministry, in this country at least. We determined that the meaning of our society at this moment is the service of faith and the prosecution of justice."

Father Hacala, who grew up in Charleston, was ordained in June 1975. He returned to West Virginia, to Wheeling College, and from there began traveling through Appalachia, talking with people and, as he put it, "touching base with various church groups."

After a year of talk and travel, he decided to settle in Lincoln County, one of the most rural counties in the state. Many of the some 20,000 residents live near, or below, the national poverty level and because of its relatively isolated setting, many 20th century ideas have yet to take root in the local hills and hollows.

"Yet at the same time, the county is centrally located," he said. "Then, too, I knew some people in this area. It just so happens that we selected Griffithsville because this house was available."

The Wheeling diocese purchased the house and Father Hacala moved in. He was soon joined byFather Peschel and by Father Rob Currie, who had been studying in Toronto after a long stint of service in India.

Father Currie, the brother of Wheeling College President Father Charles Currie, is a native of Philadelphia. A friendly man with a heart-warming smile, he coaches the baseball team and also serves as the group's chief cook even though he has a tendency to burn toasted cheese sandwiches.

Wearing casual clothes — usually jeans — and taking a low key approach, the three priests soon began making friends in the community. It wasn't long before their home became a meeting place for a small group of people, including some of the young homesteaders who have settled in this area.

"We had to overcome some initial negative feelings at first," Father Peschel said, "but our reception generally has been good, with one potable exception. We use to meet regularly in the local Lion's Club but we got kicked out after we joined the sui to stop the oil drilling. Some of the community leaders felt we were meddling in an area where we had no buiness."

The Jesuits were undaunted, however. They say they plan to stay in the area indefinitely, putting down roots and building a Christiam community.

STILL TUNED IN — At 83, Dorothy Fuldheim is the oldest and still one of the most vibrant TV commentators.

Vibrant at 83

Dorothy's still asking hard questions on TV

CLEVELAND (AP) — "I've got the title for my next book: 'Men I've Lusted For," said Dorothy Fuldheim, at 83 among the oldest and most vibrant of the television news commentators.

She wouldn't say who might be included in that volume, but suggested with a mischievous smile it should be dedicated to Jimmy Carter.

Except for a lengthy list of personalities she's interviewed, hardly anyone outside the Cleveland area has heard of the ebullient Ms. Fuldheim, who began her television career here in 1947.

She recalled during a recent interview the time she wept on the air, denouncing the killing in 1970 of four Kent State University students by Ohio National Guardsmen. She spoke of the time she told Jerry Rubin to get off the set for advocating revolution, permissive sex and dope. She remembered interviews with Chiang Kai-Shek, the Duke of Windsor, the Shah of Iran and members of the Kennedy family.

"The reason I hardly ever get turned down for interviews is that I'm polite," she said.

"My purpose is not to elicit some smart-aleck answer, but to evoke a man's personality. I still ask the same hard questions, but I have no desire to watch people squirm. People don't respect antagonism, they respect reasonableness."

She says she's had little reason to consider retirement. "I'm no fool. I don't know how many years I have left, but I'm never going to retire. I absorb more quickly than ever. The mind is like a muscle. The more you use it, the stronger it gets."

Carter feels early summit with Russ leader not likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is said to believe an early summit with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev virtually can be ruled out because Brezhnev opposes a get acquainted meeting.

In a recent letter to Carter, Brezhnev reportedly expressed a strong preference for delaying a summit until the two leaders can sit down and ratify a new agreement, presumably on strategic arms curbs, that would be negotiated in advance at a lower level.

Although Carter has said he would like to meet with Brezhnev this year, if only to get to know each other, Carter was said to feel that Brezhnev's response to a letter he dispatched last month made such a session unlikely.

American officials have indicated they do not believe a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty can be negotiated before an interim agreement expires October 1.

Some details of the Carter-Brezhnev exchange, plus the American President's views and attitudes on a variety of subjects, were conveyed Tuesday to a group of reporters under ground rules that barred public identification of the source.

Asked why he had set those ground rules, the source deferred to his press spokesman, who said he would not change the rules.

Meanwhile, Brezhnev, meeting Tuesday with U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon in the Kremlin, said some aspects of U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union "do not accord with the aim of a constructive development of relations." Brezhnev's comments were reported by the official Tass news agency.

The meeting was the first between Brezhnev and Toon since he was named ambassador last year. Western diplomatic sources indicated that U.S.-Soviet trade and human rights were among the topics discussed, although there was no official word on the subject of the meeting.

The meeting came one day after Soviet television refused to broadcast Toon's July 4 message to the Russian people. Such an address by the American ambassador in Moscow has become traditional, but American officials said the Soviets objected to a passage on human rights in the text.

On other topics, Carter was said to:

—Be considering a possible reduction of between 30 and 40 per cent in individual income tax rates as part of a tax revision proposal that would sharply limit, and in some cases eliminate, itemized deductions and other present tax breaks.

—Retain the option of looking beyond five "finalists" recommended by a search panel in choosing a new director for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

—Expect a Justice Department inquiry into alleged South Korean attempts to influence American officials to be concluded expeditiously and lawfully and with no cover-up of wrong-doing.

Carter reportedly does not believe his plan to halt the B1 bomber project and emphasize development of cruise missiles will greatly complicate SALT negotiations. He was said to believe Washington and Moscow were pretty much in agreement on placing a flying range of more than 1,000 miles on nuclear-tipped cruise missiles launched from the air.

Playgirl's new editor changing mag's image

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Women, the checkout stand just won't be the same.

No more James Caan or Warren Beatty to seduce you from the cover. No more front page kaleidoscopes of muscular, hairy-chested men to lure you to lust.

Playgirl Magazine is changing.

The publication's primary focus had been its alluring photo spreads of tastefully posed nude men, but the fouryear-old novelty has eroded. And in an era of struggling publishing companies, the magazine, although still healthy with 1.1 million readers, is looking ahead.

A 32-year-old editing whiz, corralled by publisher Douglas Lambert in January, is out to repave the image of the magazine by what she calls "a major departure in both look and content."

Although there will still be male nudity in Playgirl, males will no longer dominate the cover and their anatomy will cease to be the major focal point of inside pages, says Joyce Fleming, a former editor at Psychology Today.

"What we are trying to do is make it a total lifestyle book for women to talk to them about sexuality, education, relationships, employment, politics, their position in society, fashion and health," explained Ms. Fleming.

Her arrival at Playgirl ended the four-year reign of Marin Scott Milam whose goal, unlike Fleming's women-only approach, had always been to make Playgirl attractive to both sexes.

Recent criticism, however, claims the magazine's readers encompass a greater number of men than women, but Fleming rejects that notion.

In a survey completed late last year, even before Fleming took over, 85 per cent of Playgirl's readers were women, 80 per cent between the ages of 18 and 34. Half of them were married, half had children and half were employed outside the home, Fleming explained.

"This was the first survey done after that initial period of wild sales when you had a lot of novelty buyers," she said.

But some may ask what's wrong with sexy men like Warren Beatty glancing seductively from the cover?

"Look, the problem has been not knowing who our audience was," Fleming said, flipping casually through her predecessor's handiwork. "Look at the back issues. Here is a single man staring at you. Here are two men staring at you. Here are a bunch of men staring at you.

"Playgirl was trying to have a little something for all women sometimes. That doesn't work. I say 'O.K., this is what a playgirl is, what she does, what she thinks and what entertains her.' I think that's much more important than big names, for instance."

When Playgirl first hit the newstands in 1973, it was to the delightful accompaniment of ringing cash registers. It was the first skin magazine for women and remains cuddled snugly in that niche.

Immediate expectations were that publisher Lambert and Playgirl would do for the male genitalia what Hugh Hefner did for the female breast: bring it a certain respectability.

But it didn't quite work.

Although Playgirl's readership figures are impressive, Ms. Fleming has found that many women are embarrassed to admit they're turned on to male nudity. And this has temporarily stymied the magazine's growth.

"I still find women reading it behind closed doors so no one will see them and many are not comfortable with walking up to a newstand and buying it," Fleming said.

She knows Playgirl will have to come out of the proverbial closet before she can reach her goal of five million readers by 1980. Hence the changes. But she refuses to believe women don't get turned on to pictures of naked men.

"The reason people think that is true, of course, is that this is learned behavior and in this society there have been a lot more opportunities for men to learn that sexually explicit material is supposed to be a turnon.

"Women don't get taught as much as men about sex and the male body. And some women just ignore it. Some people honestly believe that women aren't turned on. They're just crazy, that's all."

Fleming should know.

In addition to being regarded as a sexual behavior expert, she is the creator and editor of Playgirl Advisor Magazine, which combines erotic and educational material on human sexuality.

Another problem Fleming has pledged to remedy is attracting big-name writers. Playgirl has not been able to capture a solid journalistic reputation in the tradition of Playboy. She hopes that will change.

"However, the goal has not been and still is not to do a Playboy for women," Fleming said. "That is a reputation we got strapped with."

She admits her magazine isn't even close to being topflight journalism. "No. Absolutely not. We knew we were going to be strapped with such high expectations but we aren't there yet."

To help its ailing reputation and hopefully stir up new readers, Playgirl, for starters, will have a new logo: a slender, more feminine, full-figured Statue of Liberty representing the freedom of American women.

There will also be a 10-part series on that freedom beginning in the September issue.

The series will show women "where they are in trouble and what they can do about it," and has been researched by local law professors.

Other content changes include a regular profile on women; a regular sex advice column; a regular column on women and sports; a one-page feature called "His Turn" for a man's point of view; and a cartoon strip emphasizing the more liberated woman.

"I'm not completely sure if we're doing the right thing. But I have a pretty good idea it will help reach that five million figure," Fleming added.

Goodbye, Warren. Hello, Statue of Liberty.

Move over, sailors, gals seeking tatoos

SAN DIEGO (AP)—For the man puzzled about a present for his wife or girlfriend, Joyce Nemeth suggests a gift certificate to "Tatoos by Joyce."

Ms. Nemeth, a 33-year-old mother of two, says she felt it was time that tatoos — long a male bastion — were feminized. And what better place to attack the problem than in this Navy town, with more than its share of tatoo parlors catering to sailors.

"The dramatic increase in women getting tatoos is definitely related to the women's movement," says Ms. Nemeth, an artist who gave up a teaching career to open her fashionable tatoo salon. "Until about five years ago, women were hung up about what people would think if they got tatooed."

But while women are getting more tatoos, they shy away from traditional ones — dragons, the Statue of Liberty, the word Mother, or the name of a sweetheart.

"Women want things that won't look anything like what they've seen on sailors," said Ms. Nemeth, whose customers are almost all women. "They want delicate lines and bright colors. They want art rather than a simple tatoo."

Ms. Nemeth, who said she first learned tatooing from her grandfather, does her flowers and butterflies freehand and charges $25.

Why the newfound popularity for tatoos?

"For some women it's purely a sexy thing," Ms. Nemeth said in her salon, which features plush carpeting, hanging plants and stereophonic music.

"For others, it's an expression of individuality, of personality. And others want to be tatooed because it's decorative...it's like an original piece of jewelry that can't be stolen."

Germ warfare tests held in White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Germ warfare tests at the White House? You'd better believe it.

They weren't conducted yesterday, or even last year. In fact, the whole business nearly has become lost in the mists of history. What makes the subject current is an apparent difference of opinion between the Pentagon and President Carter's White House over a reporter's request for details.

The Army acknowledged earlier this year it had turned loose nonlethal germs some years back in such public places here as the sprawling Pentagon, National Airport and the Greyhound bus depot before President Richard M. Nixon ordered a halt to all such activities in 1969.

This disclosure led to a rumor that the White House also had been a target for germ warfare experiments.

In response to an inquiry, a Pentagon spokesman said that "at the request of the White House staff, the Army in 1962 tested the air intake system of a portion of the White House." He said nonlethal bacteriological agents were employed.

Pressed for details, the spokesman said nothing would please him more than to provide an elaboration. However, he said he was under orders from the White House to say nothing further.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell later said he knew nothing about the tests or about any gag order to the Pentagon. Ditto for Jerrold Schecter, spokesman for the National Security Council. Ditto for John Warner, spokesman for the Secret Service.

So the whole affair remains as mysterious as those little microbes that floated around some part of the White House back when John F. Kennedy was president.

Hamilton Jordan, the Carter assistant known for shunning neckties whenever possible, which is much of the time, is not alone among the "Georgia Mafia" in his disregard for sartorial convention.

Jody Powell turned up at a recent black tie affair in appropriate attire save for the absence of a cummerbund around his midsection. Questioned about his departure from expected dress, Powell shot back, "This is the new style in dinner wear, turkey!"

Q. "WHEN WERE PENCILS INVENTED?" RICHARD VAN BERGER PLEASANT HILL, CA

A. PENCILS, MADE BY ENCASING GRAPHITE IN A WOOD CASE, WERE FIRST MADE IN THE MID-1600 S.

DICK ROMERO
© 1977 by NEA, Inc. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. 7/7

Almost everyone uses pencils. Children do much of their schoolwork with them. Grownups need them in their offices.

The name "pencil" comes from a Latin word "penicillus," which means "little tail," for the first pencils were fine-pointed brushes for marking paper with ink.

In ancient times, scribes used pieces of lead as pencils for ruling lines on parchment.

The English were the first to use graphite pencils, in the 1500s. They found that graphite, like lead, leaves a mark when drawn across paper.

These early pencils were slender graphite rods wrapped with twine that was unwound as the graphite wore down. When graphite was first used in pencils, people thought it contained lead. Therefore they called it black lead. People still call graphite pencils "lead pencils."

It wasn't until the 17th century that the "lead" was encased in wood to make the modern pencil.

Town comes to life again after disastrous flood

WILLIAMSON, W.Va. (AP) — Mayor Roy Taylor is a happy man these days, even if he still is discovering little patches of mud here and there.

"We found some today in the lock boxes, as a matter of fact," he said one afternoon last week. It's hard to say how long it will be before we get it all cleaned up."

But Taylor, a local banker, is too happy about the resurgence of this thriving coalfield city to be bothered by a little mud. Like the proverbial Phoenix, Williamson has risen from the debris of a disastrous flood that nearly swept away the town just 12 short weeks ago.

Back then, Williamson was under 12 feet of water as the nearby Tug Fork rose to record levels. When the water receded, the town was a muddy shambles. Today, most of the mud is gone, the commercial district is filled with shoppers and Mayor Taylor is openly optimistic about the future.

"I'm well pleased with the way the town has bounced back," he said, surveying the sparkling new interior of the First National Bank. "Except for the restaurants, just about everybody's back in business by now. We lost a poolroom and a couple of dress shops but that's about all."

Williamson's merchants have had a lot of help getting back on their feet, help that has come from both the federal and the private sectors. In addition to this emergency relief, 678 merchants and the flood stricken coalfields also have received more than $14 million in loans from the Small Business Administration.

"Yes," said Taylor, "We didn't get the low interest rate we had hoped for, but the SBA has come through with the money for the loans. Business is good and I've got no complaints. Now housing, however, is a different story."

The housing situation is a sad story, and nowhere is the story any sadder than at nearby Lobata, between Williamson and Matewan. More than 30 families lost their homes at Lobata and as of last week not a single family had been resettled.

"Me and a woman down the road are still the only folks living on their own property," said Roland Steele. "Of course, we didn't have to depend on HUD like everybody else did."

Steele's comments were accompanied by the sound of a nearby work crew setting up a mobile home.

"Just look at those old second-hand trailers," said Steele, a 73-year-old retired coal miner. "They're nothing but tin shacks. You wouldn't catch me putting my kids in one of those things. We'll have a dozen fires here this winter, you just mark my words."

Similar criticism of the federal agency prompted an on-the-spot visit from HUD Secretary Patricia Harris in late April. Before she left, she promised Lobata's displaced residents they would begin returning to their community within 15 days.

What she didn't say was that HUD planned to set up a mobile home park in Lobata, similar to the parks created after the Buffalo Creek disaster in 1971. Lobata's residents balked at this, and they wanted to return to their own land.

"You can't blame them," said Steele, "who'd want to live in a crowded trailer park when he could live on his own land. Anyway, as things now stand it'll be sometime in July before those families can move into those mobile homes HUD is setting up right now. The sewer system still isn't finished, and nobody can move in until the trailers are hooked up.

"Meanwhile, I can show you what kind of work HUD does. C'mon in my house."

He led the way into his small, cinderblock home and pointed to a long, jagged gash in a new, plasterboard ceiling. Then he went into the bathroom and pointed to a new commode and shower stall.

"The commode is so shaky I can't use it," Steele said. "I used the shower once, more than a week ago, and it still hasn't drained. That's the kind of work HUD does. Ask my neighbors, they'll tell you the same thing."

Percy Thomas, another retired miner, is one of Steele's displaced neighbors. Thomas and his family have been living in the nearby trailer park for about a month, marking time until they can get back on their own property.

"No," said Thomas, when asked about HUD. "I don't think I'll say anything. They've got a pretty lousy trailer set up on our land but I don't want to talk about it anymore. I've already argued until I've made myself sick."

Power site will float

NEW YORK (AP) — Where do you dock a floating nuclear power plant? Not just anywhere, according to The Compass, a publication of MOAC, a commercial marine insurer.

In an article describing the nation's first floating nuclear power plant — scheduled for activation in 1984 off the New Jersey coast — The Compass notes that the breakwater for these plants will be the largest, strongest structure ever built in the ocean. It must be capable of protecting the power plant from a one-in-a-million storm with wind velocity up to 300 mph, and be capable of stopping the largest oil tankers from ramming the plant.

The breakwater for the New Jersey power plant will be built about three miles from shore. The Compass notes that seaborne sites for power plants must be in water between 40 and 70 feet deep with a temperature variation of between 28.6 and 85 degrees Fahrenheit.

ORDINANCE NO. 583
AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS RELATIVE TO THE ISSUANCE OF ALL NIGHT PARKING PERMITS FOR DISABLED PERSONS AND AMENDING THE SAN DIMAS MUNICIPAL CODE

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS DOES HEREBY ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Section 10.24.055 is hereby added to Chapter 10.24. of Title 10 of the San Dimas Municipal Code to read as follows:

"10.24.055. Notwithstanding any other provisions of the San Dimas Municipal Code to the contrary, whenever an application for an all night parking permit is filed, pursuant to the provisions of this Chapter, by a disabled person, and for a motor vehicle which displays either the distinguishing license plate or other evidence of a disability as issued by the California Department of Motor Vehicles, then said all night parking permit shall be issued without investigation or the requirement that there be any of the findings set forth in Section 10.24.050 of the San Dimas Municipal Code. Any application filed by a disabled person shall be exempt from the fees otherwise provided for in Section 10.24.040 of the San Dimas Municipal Code."

SECTION 2. This Ordinance shall take effect thirty (30) days after its final passage, and within fifteen (15) days after its passage, the City Clerk shall cause it to be published in the Progress Bulletin, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of San Dimas, and hereby designated for that purpose.

PASSED, APPROVED AND ADOPTED this 28th day of June, 1977.

GOSH
Chalk Talk from
Griswold's OLD Schoolhouse

Another exciting week lined up for you here at GOSH! The Strutters, a local Ontario-area group, open Wed. night in the Boiler Room for a 2-week gig. The group's Motown-brass sound can't be resisted — everyone who hears them raves about them. "Strut" . . . don't walk . . . into the Boiler Room Wed.-Sat. 9-1:30, thru the 16th.

Open night for the Claremont Playhouse's 3rd production "Curse You, Jack Dalton" is this Fri., July 8. This time it's a real old-fashioned "melier-dramer" complete with music! You'll have to come boo and hiss in the appropriate places during this irresistible period piece. Dastardly deeds and lovely heroiness . . . Shades of Snidely Whiplash! Fri. and Sat. nites at 8, Sun. at 3 pm — for ticket info call (714) 621-5005.

One of the most fascinating things to occur in a while is about to take place in . . . of all places . . . the Art Gallery! Four of our "resident" artists — those who have studios right here at GOSH — have put together a fantastic show called THE CEREMONIAL OBJECT — "objects" subject to the artist's interpretation! Clay sculpture by Connie Layne and Ken Smith, wood work by Richard Patterson and glass by Phys Williams. The neat thing of it is, each artist will have a spot in the show area to demonstrate his/her technique, while their interpretation of the show theme is on display. The show will be presented thru the entire month of July, with a reception honoring our fine artsy people to kick it all off, this Sat. nite from 7-10 . . .in the Gallery.

While you're checking out the Resident Artists Show, be sure to wander back to Richard Patterson's studio to see the other fantastic things this talented man has on display. He makes dulcimers that are a form of sculpture, all out of wood, yet they are also entirely functional as instruments, too. Beautiful rare woods, all hand crafted, sanded til they're like velvet. . . you must see his tops, too — each has a name — many are collector's pieces — all signed; dated.

Joyce Brothers
Making decision

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I was an active homosexual for 12 years. I then went into in-depth analysis and now, after 10 years of dating women, I finally married a woman much younger than I. We're extremely happy and I believe we have a good relationship that I hope will endure. She, incidentally, knows all about my past. Our problem is that she wants children and I'm afraid I'm too old to be a good father. I like children, but I'm scared. I realize it's not fair to rob her of this experience because she needs a child to make her life fuller. Do you feel that a man shouldn't have children after 40? — D.O.

DEAR D.O.: Of course, it depends on the man. I don't believe anyone, regardless of age, should have children if he doesn't love and want them. Having children is a serious matter. They demand a great deal, emotionally, physically, and economically, until they reach their late teens.

University of California sociologist Corrinne Nydegger tested nearly a hundred fathers whose ages ranged from their early 20s to their late 60s. The early fathers felt "role strain" and discomfort about parenthood. The men who became fathers later in life turned out to be excellent parents. They were less apt to be competitive with their children and were better at promoting the autonomous development of their children.

The fact that you've given this serious thought indicates that you probably would be a sensitive, aware father with much to offer a child. Your past therapy must have given you a great deal of insight into yourself. That should also enhance your performance as a parent.

If age is the only reason you're anxious about becoming a parent, I think you needn't worry.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: There's a nude beach near where we live and my mother won't let my sister and me go there even though we're in our late teens. I think this is a bit silly. Our uncle is always trying to convince her that it's okay and far from sordid or dirty, the way she seems to think. My uncle is quite a great guy and he's a confirmed nude beach dude. They're having a beach party in a few weeks and he's asked us to go anyway and explain to my mother later. He's even offered to take the blame. — N.N.

DEAR N.N.: Your uncle may seem like a great guy and an uninhibited, liberated man, but he's not behaving like one. Any adult who deliberately tries to come between a parent and child has an ulterior motive. This should be considered carefully. In short, you definitely shouldn't be taken in. It is dishonest, immature and unfair to your mother.

Most nudists have a strong streak of the exhibitionist in them, no matter how much they may profess to like the feel of the water, the sun, the sand, the rocks, etc. Men who doubt their masculinity are particularly eager to display it. They often encourage women to join stripping, not so much because they are eager to view the female body but because it helps to reassure them that they are different from women.

Wanting to look at the nude body is a natural childish expression of normal curiosity, but when an adult continues to be hung up on this, chances are he or she has a problem.

Cover can save heating of pool

LOS ANGELES (AP) — So you're the owner of one of nation's estimated one million-plus swimming pools. Friends and neighbors who once hinted at an invitation for an afternoon dip now look askance at what seems an extravagance in these days of drought and energy shortages.

What are you going to do — pave it over? Not likely, especially since there are some far cheaper and more enticing alternatives.

The pool industry folk at the California Swimming Pool Energy, Codes and Legislative Council have come up with a series of suggestion to cut water use and hearing costs without going to huge expense.

Tops on the list of recommendations is a pool cover. Not necessarily the heavy canvas type used in winter conditions when the pool is closed, but lightweight plastic bubbles or foam blankets that can let warmth in, keep dirt out and reduce evaporation which experts say can run 600 gallons a week, depending on such factors as pool size, location, air and water temperatures.

The combination of a cover, which costs between $50 and $500 and some common sense, like keeping down the kids' splashing, can easily cut that evaporation in half, experts say.

Covers can also help pools retain warmth overnight. Heating costs can be trimmed 50 per cent or much more in some cases, manufacturers say, based on the type of blanket and when it's on.

Next in importance is turning the thermostat down. The American Red Cross considers 78 degrees the healthiest swimming temperature but a goodly number of pools are tuned to 82 degrees. Industry experts say those extra four degrees can use as much as 40 per cent more of that expensive natural gas.

To further reduce heating costs, shorten the period of months the pool is heated, eliminating the cool early spring and chilly autumn period when large gulps of gas are needed to keep water comfortable.

Thermostats on pools used only on weekends should be turned down eight or 10 degrees and then hiked back up Friday. You can also save by turning off the pilot light when the heater isn't in use.

A major saving in electricity — 40 to 50 per cent a year — can come from severely shortening the time pool filters are run. Many operate 10 to 12 hours a day but the industry says four or five hours is sufficient for most pools. If that doesn't keep the water fresh, increase the daily time by a half-hour until clarity is restored.

With summer power shortages looming, utilities are requesting that pool owners avoid running pumps and filers during the peak 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. power demand period. Break up the filtering into two to three-hour periods in the morning and early evening.

Other suggestions include sheltering the pool from breezes which increase evaporation and eliminating spraying and splashing from water inlets and pool sweeps.

Also recommended is a thorough check by a maintenance specialist — industry estimated cost $50 to $100 plus repairs — to insure the system is without the sort of minor problems that can add up to a noticeable loss of efficiency.

For those thinking about draining pools for the drought — not only can they be dangerous holes but that chemical-filled water, largely useless elsewhere, is a major factor in keeping the plaster walls from collapsing.

Saturday activity scheduled

"A Saturday Night Special" is the theme for the Chaffey Community Republican Women Federated's fund-raising event scheduled Saturday, according to Mrs. Eileen Ward, coordinator.

All club members, spouses and guest will attend the event commencing at 5:30 p.m. in the Alta Loma home of the Wayne McGehees.

Purpose of the event is to raise funds to maintain the year-round Republican headquarters for the area.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Ward, 628-5794, or Republican headquarters, 983-4118.

Today is Thursday, July 7, the 188th day of 1977. There are 177 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1846, the American flag was raised at Monterey, California after surrender of the Mexican garrison, and the U.S. annexation of California was proclaimed.

On this date:

In 1801, the Black general, Toussaint l'Ouverture, proclaimed Haiti's independence from France.

In 1865, four people were hanged after being named as accomplices of John Wilkes Booth in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln.

In 1898, the U.S. annexed Hawaii.

In 1941, during World War Two, U.S. forces landed in Iceland to forestall any Nazi invasion.

In 1958, President Dwight Eisenhower signed the Alaska statehood bill.

In 1973, 23 people were executed in Iraq on charges they had plotted to overthrow the government.

Ten years ago: U.S. Vietnam commander William Westmoreland urged the Pentagon to provide up to 100 thousand more troops for the Vietnam War and said the Allies were winning slowly but surely.

Five years ago: Heavy rain in many parts of Japan triggered floods and mudslides that caused a death toll of more than 400.

One year ago: The Indonesian government said nine thousand people died in an earthquake in New Guinea.

Today's birthdays: French fashion designer Pierre Cardin is 55 years old. Ringo Starr, formerly of the Beatles is 37.

Thought for today: History is more or less bunk. — Henry Ford, 1863-1947.

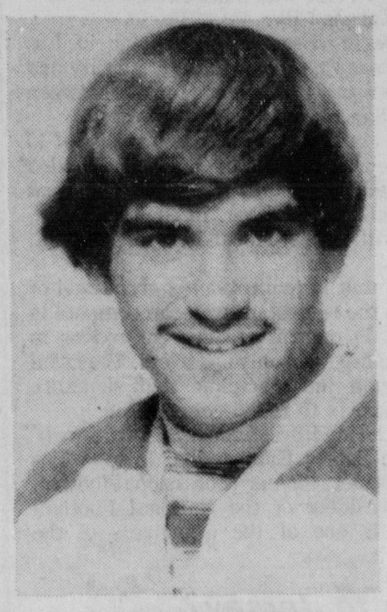
Upland youth has Olympic ambitions



JON ERICKSON

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

The local area has long been a hotbed for budding pro prospects in such sports as baseball and football.

Now, you just might be able to add hockey to that list — if Upland's Jon Erickson continues to progress at a rapid rate in that sport.

Erickson, only 14, was recently invited to the tryouts for the 1980 United States Olympic hockey squad. He is the youngest player ever selected to attend the U.S. Olympic tryouts, and was one of only a handful of U.S. amateurs nationwide who were invited to the tryout sessions.

The tryouts are slated for July 17-29 at Squaw Valley, California. This is the first time the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States has scheduled the hockey tryouts so far in advance of the Olympics.

While hockey is scarcely a sport that one associates with Southern California, Erickson, a native Californian, comes by his talents on the ice honestly.

He has been playing the sport on an organized basis since age four at various rinks around the Southland.

His father, Jack, currently the Business Services Director at San Antonio Community Hospital, was a top-notch collegiate player at the University of Minnesota and has coached the sport in his spare time since graduation from college.

"I've helped Jon with his game, but he's done most of the work himself," notes the elder Erickson. "He's been very dedicated."

Jon hasn't had it easy in pursuing his hockey interest. He's had to compete with older boys most of his playing years on the ice, and has sharpened his skills by playing on teams in various tournaments in the U.S. and Canada.

In 1975-76 his team won the California State Championship in the Bantam Division (13-14 year-olds). This past year Jon's squad won the State title in the Midget Division (15-16 age group). Jon competed in the Midget Division despite the fact he was 14.

In both State tourneys the younger Erickson was tabbed the outstanding player and also was the high scorer.

He's also won similar MVP and high scorer honors at competition around the nation. In fact, it was his recent performance at a couple of these out-of-state tourneys which won him the invite from the AHA, according to Mr. Erickson.

"Jon participated in Midget Division tournaments in Massachusetts and Minnesota this year," Jon's father recalls. "That's where he drew the attention of the Amateur Hockey Association people. In fact, the California team which Jon was on beat the Minnesota State champs in six out of seven games in the tourney back there."

The Squaw Valley tryout sessions are a new plan of attack for formulating a U.S. Olympic team which, hopefully, will be able to compete with the better organized and more experienced Olympic squads of Russia and Canada. The 1980 Winter Olympic Games are scheduled for Lake Placid, New York.

Both college and high-school age players are being sought by the AHA for the U.S. squad, but Jon is by far the youngest to receive an invitation to the tryout camp. Should he make the U.S. team, he would be 17 at the time of the 1980 Games.

"It's kind of a longshot that Jon will make the Olympic team this time around," Jack Erickson said. "However, realistically, I think he should be able to make the 1984 team if he continues to progress."

Jon practices locally at the Ice Bowl in Ontario. He is also active in other sports such as baseball, soccer and track. In fact, he received a most outstanding athlete award at his graduation this spring from Pioneer Junior High in Upland.

Overtime hurts L.A.

Progress Bulletin
Sports
Pomona, California ■ Thursday, July 7, 1977

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers wound up the first half of the season nine games ahead of the Cincinnati Reds.

Their 54-27 record is the best in baseball.

Those are the good things. The bad thing was they lost to the Houston Astros, 2-1, in 14 innings Wednesday night.

The loss snapped the Dodgers' modest four-game winning streak. Worse, it was the Angelenos' sixth loss in nine overtime games this year and marked their fourth defeat in seven meetings with the Astros, a club they lead by 17½ games.

"Those are the games we've got to win," said manager Tommy Lasorda. "We have to win extra inning games at home. I have no idea why we play the Astros so tough."

In the last two years, there have been 10 one-run decisions between the two clubs.

All of the runs Wednesday night came on home runs. Starter Rick Rhoden gave the Dodgers a 1-0 lead when he hit his first homer of the season and second of his career in the third inning off James Rodney Richard. The ball went over the centerfield fence.

"I had just one good swing against Richard," Rhoden said. "To hit a home run off him you have to be lucky and that's what I was."

Houston got even the next inning when former Dodger Joe Ferguson smashed one of Rhoden's offerings into the leftfield pavilion, his 12th of the season.

The game stayed that way until the 14th when Jose Cruz slapped one of Mike Garman's pitches over the fence for his seventh roundtripper and the game.

Richard and Rhoden each went 10 innings before giving way to pinch-hitters. Rhoden gave up seven hits, struck out six and walked only one.

Richard was even more impressive. The big (6-8) hurler fanned 12, allowed six hits and walked two.

Charlie Hough took over in the 11th and hurled two perfect innings for the Dodgers while striking out three. Garman (4-1) had a strring of seven successive scoreless innings before Cruz connected.

"Yes, I was thinking home run at that point," Cruz admitted. "I thought I had a double two pitches before, but the ball was foul. I think I'll take the home run."

The Dodgers missed two chances to win. They had two runners on in both the 12th and 13th innings, but failed to score.

All told, the Angelenos left 10 runners stranded and got nine hits. They were coming off a four-game sweep in San Francisco in which they scored 34 runs on 60 hits.

After the game, Lasorda asked, "where was that lively ball tonight."

The "lively" ball may have been absent, but the customers weren't. 36,757 turned out on a warm night swelling the season total to 1,313,125.

DODGER DATA — Davey Lopes missed the game. Lopes was hit on the back of the left hand in batting practice.

Lee Lacy's hand will be examined Friday and a decision made then on whether to take him off the disabled list. When Lacy goes back on the roster, someone has to be dropped.

Doug Rau (8-1) and Ken Forsch (4-6) will be the pitchers in tonight's series windup.

The San Diego Padres come in for four games beginning Friday night. T-Shirt night is Friday night with all youngsters 14 and under receiving a Dodger T-Shirt.

Saturday's game has a 6 p.m. start because of Sunday's doubleheader. Then the Dodgers go on the road to Houston and San Diego.

Steve Garvey had a modest six-game hitting streak ended Wednesday night. But Steve Yeager hit in his 11th straight.

Rhoden's homer was the club's 104th of the season, 13 more than they hit all last year. They have hit at least one roundtripper in 26 of their last 28 games (41 total).

The Dodger record for homers is 208 set in Brooklyn in 1953. The Dodgers of 1962, who hold the club's L.A. record, had only 64 homers after 81 games and didn't hit their 104th until game 118.

Ron Cey also was cooled off Wednesday night. Cey, who had had nine hits in his last 10 at-bats, went hitless.

In games prior to Wednesday night, the Dodgers had scored 91 runs for Rhoden, an average of more than six per game.

ON HIS WAY OUT

Angels' Jerry Remy (2) jaws with first base umpire Alan Clark after Remy was called out on close play Wednesday night. Remy was soon ejected. Minnesota defeated Halos, 4-3.

Twins, umps frustrate Angels

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)— Minnesota reliever Tom Johnson had something on his mind and it was more than just getting another out.

Johnson, who hurled the final 2 1-3 innings to pick up his 10th win of the season, arrived in the third inning of the Twins' 4-3 victory over California Wednesday night after a grueling session at a local hospital where his wife gave birth to a daughter by Caesarian section at game time.

"I wasn't sure what was going to happen," said the hard throwing right-hander, now 10-3. "I couldn't go in with her either because of the surgery."

The Johnsons, who already have a three-year-old son, welcomed the daughter and contented Tom rushed off to the park where another emergency was developing.

"I hadn't thought about pitching," continued Johnson. "I guess I was still in kind of a daze out there."

Lyman Bostock's fifth homer of the year, a screaming line shot to lead off the eighth inning, gave the Twins the 4-3 advantage.

"I didn't really know if it was out, but I was hoping," said Bostock, who golfed a low fast ball from losing pitcher Paul Hartzell, 3-6.

Johnson came in with one out in the seventh and was nicked for a run. In the eighth he surrended a walk and single and pinch-runner Orlando Ramirez raced home on a fielder's choice that tied the score 3-3.

The Angels threatened in the ninth on singles by rookie Thad Bosley and Don Baylor, but Larry Hisle's diving, shoestring catch of a Rusty Torres line drive ended the game with California runners stranded at first and third base.

"There's more to baseball than hitting," said Hisle, who has been mired in a batting slump the last week. "I think center field is a little easier to play too because you don't have to worry about the ball slicing as much."

Butch Wynegar also homered for Minnesota on a disputed call in the seventh while Rich Chiles and Craig Kusick also knocked in runs.

"I don't think Wynegar's home run made it over the fence," said Angels' Manager Norm Sherry. "What can I say? The umpiring was terrible."

Sherry and Jerry Remy argued heatedly with umpire Al Clark on a disputed seventh inning call at first base when Remy was called out although Kusick appeared to have been pulled off the bag by the throw.

Remy apparently directed some ill-chosen words at Clark and was ejected.

Sherry got into the act in the bottom of the inning when Wynegar's home run bounced back onto the playing field.

Tony Solaita homered off Twins' starter Pete Redfern in the sixth to tie the game 1-1 and Bosley knocked in another for the Angels with one of his three singles.

The teams complete their two-game series tonight.

Pulford seeking solid defense

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Pulford, new general manager-coach of the Chicago Black Hawks, says his first priority in his new job will be to build a competitive team based on a solid defense.

"I want a very competitive team. The main thing to winning is a good defense ...," Pulford said Wednesday after being named to the dual post with the National Hockey League team. "The one thing I would hope to do is get our goals-against average down."

Pulford, 41, comes to Chicago after five seasons as coach of the Los Angeles Kings. He led the Kings into the NHL playoffs the past four seasons and compiled a 178-150-68 record during his five-year tenure. However, he reportedly was unhappy with management's handling of day-to-day operations.

At Chicago, he replaces Bill White, who was named interim coach after the Black Hawks fired Billy Reay last December. Plans for White were not announced although he reportedly will be offered a coaching job with Dallas of the Central League.

"There was speculation that I was considering other teams — that's what it was, only speculation. This is the only team I ever considered," said Pulford.

Black Hawks President Bill Wirtz said Pulford's appointment "brings a new approach to our organization."

Wirtz, who added that "Pulford is the type of guy any organization should be looking for," also announced that Tommy Ivan, the team's general manager for the past 23 years, was being promoted to vice president and assistant to the president.

Jack Davison, with the Black Hawks organization for 19 years, will serve as assistant general manager and director of player personnel, Wirtz said.

Reports had been circulating that Black Hawks' star defenseman Bobby Orr would accept an administrative position Wednesday, but no immediate plans for Orr were announced by team officials.

"I do not know as he does not know whether or not he will again be able to play," Pulford said of Orr, who has been slowed by recurring knee injuries in recent seasons. "He certainly wants to and we certainly wish to have him because I believe he is the greatest hockey player of all time."

Davila fights Vasquez

LOS ANGELES — The world's fifth rated bantamweight, Alberto Davila, of Pomona, takes what could be his last step towards a bantamweight title match with WBA champ Alfonso Zamora this summer when he meets Mexico's Manny Vasquez in tonight's featured 10 round main event at the Olympic Auditorium.

Davila, 23-3 with nine knockouts, stopped 10th ranked Frankie Duarte in five rounds three weeks ago in stunning fashion. That win gives Davila victories over three men currently rated in the top 10. The other two are Lupe Pintor (4) and Lupe Hernandez (6).

Vasquez, 19-7-2 with eight knockouts, claims his biggest win to be over challenger Famosito Gomez of Mexico City.

A Davila-Zamora title match could well result by the end of summer, according to Olympic matchmaker Don Chargin.

"Davila's done everything asked of him," says Chargin. "He's beaten three men in the top 10 which means he hasn't ducked anyone . . . that's something very few challengers — or champions — in any division can say.

"I'm close to finalizing a title match for Alberto. Benny Georgino, his manager, says he'd welcome a Zamora bout. That's half the battle."

Tonight's card begins at 8 p.m. with amateurs.

Japan evens U.S. series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Don Larsen has come back to haunt American baseball.

An even more economical version of the author of the only perfect game in a World Series is Masayuki Matsunuma, who spaced five singles in pitching Japan to a 4-0 victory Wednesday night that deadlocked the sixth College Baseball Championship Series.

"Control, control — Don Larsen, Larsen, you know," said an interpreter when asked about Matsunuma style of shunning a windup and always pitching from the stretch position.

"It give him better control of his pitches."

Japanese Coach Makato Ohta called Matsunuma's effort "our best pitching, our best game. A big victory. Now we have a chance (in the series)."

With a second straight impressive victory, the Japanese evened the best-of-seven series at two games all. After a single game here Thursday night, the series concludes Saturday and Sunday nights in Los Angeles.

American Coach Ron Stillwell of California Lutheran again was impressed by the Japanese pitching.

"Good Japanese pitching, slow American bats about tells it," Stillwell said. "Their pitching has been great, but the way we're hitting I think Mr. Ohta could get us out."

Matsunuma struck out six, walked one and aside from the hits had only two balls hit to the outfield. One was a linedrive by pinch-hitter Dave Hostetler of Southern California that leftfielder Akio Ishii made a leaping, spectacular catch on in the seventh inning.

Hayes breaks British record

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Mark Hayes, a five-year veteran of the U.S. pro tour, shot a second-round 63, seven under par, to break the all-time record for the British Open by two strokes and charge into the early second-round lead today.

With his first-round 76, Hayes stood at one-under 139 for 36 holes. Chi-san Hsu of Taiwan and Howard Clark of England each stood at 140.

Hayes sank a 12-foot putt on the 500-yard, par-five 17 for an eagle three to go eight under par for the round but bogeyed the 18th—his only bogey of a round that included six birdies and an eagle.

The previous Open record of 65 was set by Henry Cotton in 1934 and equaled eight times, the last by Spain's Angel Gallardo this morning.

Hayes, who will be 28 in five days and comes from Edmond, Okla., has won in excess of $90,000 this year and already has picked up a couple of tournament victories, including the important Tournament Players Division title.

It was his putter that did it for him today. He one-putted 13 times in the round, once from 35 feet on the 409-yard, par-four 16th.

He started by downing putts of 12 and 13 feet to birdie the second and third par-four holes. Then on the 528-yard, par-five seventh his drive landed in the rough. A three-iron was just short of the green, a chip landed to within 10 feet, and he was down from there.

The next three holes he two-putted, but got pars nevertheless.

On the 177-yard, par-three 11th he was within a foot of the pin with his five-iron tee shot, and on the next hole was down from eight feet. He birdied those two, then had another run of three pars—getting himself bunkered on the 209-yard 15th but getting out to within 15 feet to sink for a par three.

After his 35-foot putt on the 16th, his approach on the 17th was within 12 feet of the pin and he sank for an eagle.

His only bad hole was the last. He was bunkered from the 18th tee, was out short of the green, was still short with a pitch, pitched again to within five feet, and was down for a bogey.

Throughout the round, Hayes was putting cross-handed with a grip he started using only three rounds ago.

Firing an erratic round that included six birdies and six bogeys, Chi-san carded a pair of 35s for a second-round total of 70, matching his opening-day card.

Clark shot 68, two under par, in the second round over the 6,875-yard, par-70 Ailsa course in balmy, unusually warm Scottish weather that reached temperatures in the high 70s.

Gaylord Burrows, an Englishman playing out of the United States but not yet a U.S. citizen, opened with a two-under 33 in the second round. He faltered coming home, however, shot 39 with four bogeys, including a string of three in a row from No. 14, and finished at 72-141, one over par for the tournament.

Hubert Green, one of the later starters who was at two-over 72 after the first round, birdied the second hole then fired a hole-in-one on the 167-yard, par-three fourth. At that point he stood three under for the round and one under for the tournament, putting him among the leaders.

With about a third of the 156 golfers in the clubhouse, defending champion Johnny Miller, Gallardo and Ray Floyd were in a group at 143. Jerry Pate was at 144, and Tom Weiskopf stood at 145.

Miller shot a four-over 73 that included six bogeys, three on each nine, and only two birdies. He had nines of 38 and 36 and commented, "I just threw the tournament away. The start just killed me."

Miller bogeyed Nos. 5, 6 and 9 without a birdie on the front side and couldn't get anything going after that.

"The way I'm playing, it's a sin to shoot 74," a disgusted Miller said, adding: "Ah, well, it's just a game."

Reds win on extra points

By Associated Press

The climate at Atlanta Stadium was humid, but it was hotter for the pitchers than it was for the hitters. And that's nothing new.

"It's pitiful," said Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, talking about one of the best hitting parks in the major leagues. "It's strictly a launching pad and nothing else. It's tough on the pitching, tough on the manager and tough on everybody."

Line drives richocheted around Atlanta Stadium with their accustomed ferocity Wednesday night. And after it stopped raining baseballs, the Reds had a football-sized 15-13 decision over the Atlanta Braves.

No wonder, then, Anderson drew an analogy to football in his post-game comments.

"They got a touchdown, extra point and two field goals," he said with a smile. "We hit two touchdowns, went for a two-pointer after the second one, and nailed it down."

Then Anderson said, quite seriously:

"Whatever a guy does here, you can just take one-third off. If a guy has an ERA of five here, he's a good pitcher. I can understand what Dave (Bristol, the Atlanta manager) has to put up with here."

Bristol sweated through the humidity and home runs, one of which was a grand slam by Dave Concepcion.

"When Concepcion hit the homer," said Bristol, "I thought there must have been 15 guys crossing the plate. They just kept coming across the plate."

Pirates 11, Cardinals 8

Fernando Gonzalez' three-run homer off Al Hrabosky in the seventh led Pittsburgh over St. Louis. Gonzalez' homer came after the Cardinals had taken an 8-6 lead with seven runs in their half of the inning. The St. Louis burst was capped by Ted Simmons' three-run homer off Pittsburgh relief star Rich Gossage.

Phillies 5, Mets 3

Jerry Martin's bases-loaded single and a sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Tim McCarver produced three sixth-inning runs, enabling Philadelphia to beat New York.

The victory was the Phillies' seventh in a row; the loss the seventh in a row for the Mets.

Philadelphia trailed 3-1 New York's Jon Matlack, 3-10, starting the sixth. Then they rallied to beat Matlack for the ninth straight time since he last defeated them June 27, 1975.

Cubs 8, Expos 6

Greg Gross socked his first major league homer, a three-run shot in the sixth inning, to lift Chicago over Montreal. The homer came off Don Stanhouse, 5-8, whose grand-slam homer in the second had given the Expos a 5-1 lead.

The Cubs, who snapped a three-game losing streak and Montreal's seven-game winning streak, closed the gap with three runs in the third on Larry Biittner's two-run homer and Steve Ontiveros' RBI single. Gross' homer in the seventh gave the Cubs a 7-5 edge and their ultimate winning run.

Padres 7, Giants 5

San Diego turned three San Francisco errors into three unearned runs in the 12th inning, capping the game-winning rally with Dave Kingman's run-scoring single.

Dan Spillner, 4-0, was the winner in relief as the Giants equaled their longest losing streak in San Francisco history, eight in a row.

George Brett hits after hospital stay

By Associated Press

After lying in a hospital bed for four days, George Brett proved he could still hit snowballs on Christmas Day.

Wednesday morning, Brett checked out of a hospital after a four-day stay for treatment of an infected left elbow. Wednesday night, he pinch-hit a single in the bottom of the ninth to drive in Frank White with the winning run in the Royals 8-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I was pretty weak, but when you've been on your back for four days I guess you are," said last year's American League batting champion.

Frank White led off the Royals ninth with a single and stole second. Then Brett delivered his game-winning hit off Bill Castro, 7-5.

"I was suprised at myself—at how confident I felt when I went up there. And with the ovation I got, if I'd had a broken leg I don't think I would have felt it."

Perhaps the least surprised person was Royals Manager Whitey Herzog.

"I can't say I felt calm about things," he said, "But I knew, too, that George Brett could hit snowballs on Christmas Day."

So did winning pitcher Marty Pattin, who won his third game in five decisions.

"As soon as he stepped up there, I just knew they weren't going to get him out," said Pattin. "The boy is awesome."

Orioles 2, Tigers 0

Mike Flanagan fired a six hitter and Ken Singleton slugged his 10th home run of the season as Baltimore won its seventh consecutive game and moved within one-half game of the first-place New York Yankees in the AL East.

Red Sox 9, Blue Jays 5

Carl Yastrzemski and Fred Lynn had four hits apiece in a 17-hit Boston attack as the Red Sox beat Toronto for the fourth time in five outings this season.

Yastrzemski, who made a run-saving catch in the fourth inning and turned a line drive into a double play in the sixth, scored three runs and drove in two.

Rangers 4, A's 3

Juan Beniquez stole home in the sixth inning and blasted a solo homer in the seventh as the Rangers snapped a three-game losing streak.

White Sox 4, Mariners 2

Oscar Gamble blasted a pair of solo home runs and Alan Bannister delivered a two-run single, leading Chicago to its seventh straight victory and sending the Mariners to their fourth straight loss.

In 1944, when the major league baseball schedule was 154 games, Babe Dahlgren of the Pittsburgh Pirates got into 158 games.

NFL looks at TV money

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC wants a piece of the Super Bowl. CBS and NBC are interested in Thursday night football. A West Coast promoter would like to show the playoffs and Super Bowl on closed-circuit television. There is even talk of televising some games on Sunday night.

These are some of the items on the agenda as the National Football League, the only major league that airs its games on all three networks, gears up for contract talks next week.

The current NFL contract with the three networks runs out after the upcoming season. It's time to begin hard bargaining and one thing is certain. There will be more pro football on the tube starting with the 1978 campaign than ever before.

The NFL schedule expands to 16 regular-season games in 1978 and the playoff format will include two extra games involving wild-card teams. The three networks combined currently pay about $60 million a season for rights to the NFL games and they'll pay more in the future.

All three have the right of first refusal for renewing their current packages. CBS has the Sunday National Conference games, a couple of NFC Saturday dates, a Thanksgiving Day game and the NFC playoffs. NBC gets the same package but with AFC games. And ABC has the Monday night package.

CBS had first crack at Monday night football when it started on a regular basis back in 1969. But the network turned it down in favor of its entertainment lineup. NBC then declined the package because the network had purchased a lot of movies and wanted to show them Monday nights. ABC, which didn't have much else at the time, bought the package and, as they say, the rest is history.

CBS pays more for its NFC package than NBC does for the AFC games because the NFC includes a better selection of TV markets and, consequently, gets higher ratings. Both conferences have New York teams but the NFC has the second, third and fourth best markets—Los Angeles, Chicago and Philadelphia—while the AFC includes less lucrative outlets like Houston, Kansas City, Baltimore and San Diego.

Last season was not a banner year for the NFL on NBC. The ratings on the AFC games were down about six per cent as compared to the NFC on CBS which was up about 25 per cent and the ABC Monday night games which were up about six per cent.

Assuming all three networks agree, basically, to carry the same packages they have carried before, the main wrangling should come in discussions of new time periods and, of course, the Super Bowl.

The first Super Bowl was in January, 1967, and both CBS and NBC carried it. Since then, the game has alternated between those two networks with CBS getting Super Bowl XII next January.

Now ABC wants to join the rotation. It has been suggested that ABC could get the game once every five years with the other two networks splitting the other four years. But ABC probably won't be satisfied with that arrangement and it appears likely the three networks will wind up rotating Super Bowl coverage.

Thursday night football?

While the prospect of another night of pro football may be appalling to some, CBS and NBC apparently feel there are enough football nuts in the land to justify it, at least on an occasional basis. ABC, currently enjoying great success with its prime time schedule, may be reluctant to get involved with another night of pro football.

The NFL, wary of overexposure but also eager for new sources of revenue, may come up with a separate package which could include two or three Thursday night games and as many Sunday night games. Interested parties would be invited to negotiate on the package.

Meanwhile, the NFL has also heard from California-based promoter Bill Sargent who reportedly offered the league in the neighborhood of $400 million for rights to the Super Bowl and championship playoffs for five years. He planned to show the games on closed-circuit TV.

The NFL, however, has made it plain it is not interested. The networks would not like the idea, the fans would hate it and, last but not least, Congress would not be amused.

Ted Greene coasts, 11-3

Ted Greene exploded for six runs in the second inning Wednesday night as the Big League team coasted to an 11-3 decision over Pomona American.

In other Big League action, Chino defeated Upland Foothill, 11-0, and La Verne took a 5-4 decision in eight innings over Pomona National.

Bret Rhinehard's two-run double and Dwight Tiel's run scoring triple highlighted the second stanza when Ted Greene ran up six runs on the scoreboard.

Pomona American cut Ted Greene's margin to 6-2 in the third. But the Ted Greene outfit racked up two runs in the fourth, one in the six and two in the seventh to blow the game open. Ted Greene collected 11 hits in the seven inning contest.

HAS SOCCER ARRIVED? We guess it has. Within the same week a healthy crowd of 32,000 filed into the Coliseum to see the Aztec vs. Cosmos game and at the same time a popular ad appeared in local newspapers featuring a sketch of a soccer player booting a ball under the rhetorical question: "Jock itch?" . . .

LAST WEEK WE KICKED AROUND THE SUBJECT OF SYSTEMS OF PLAY. This week let's consider the subject of matching players to positions. To begin with, strong consideration must be given to the age of the players. The younger the player, the more that player should be given an opportunity to experience playing various positions. The emphasis should be placed on developing their individual skills within a very uncomplicated system of play that all members can easily execute.

The more skilled a player becomes, the better that player is capable of handling any position on the field. As a player becomes more skilled and more mature, the selection of a "permanent" position may be considered more seriously. It is vital that a player's desire be considered; a fullback who wants to play forward should be given an opportunity to do so, etc. Sentencing a player to a specific position for the entire season, without considering his wishes, fantasies, and aspirations, is like assuming that all kids love liver because it is food. A player may love soccer but hate his position.

We are not suggesting that soccer anarchy be encouraged; it is a common sight to see new teams with all members chasing after the ball in beehive manner without consideration for positions. What we are suggesting is that once positions are clearly understood by all the members of the team (including the goalie), players should be allowed to try their hand, or foot, at any position they wish.

Some coaches go so far as to have the players change positions every quarter, in snake fashion. Others do likewise but limit the switching to various positions within the same line whether it be defense, midfield, or forward. Most coaches that we know, however, prefer to stabilize their team, after taking into consideration the player's desires and capabilities, and then make player-position changes according to a less severe format.

Whatever system a coach may prefer to use with his team is fine, but the important thing is to give an opportunity to the players to experience various positions in order to enrich their knowledge of soccer.

A fullback who experiences playing forward will gain further insight into a forward's way of thinking, perception of shooting angles, changes of speed, control of the ball at various heights and speed, heading angles, etc., etc.

Conversely, a forward who plays fullback will have an opportunity to examine and understand a defenseman's way of thinking: the need to cut angles of passing and shooting, the importance of staying between the ball and the goal, the danger of over-reacting to a forward's feint, the ease of playing against a forward who over-dribbles, the difficulty of playing against a forward with excellent ball skills, etc.

The next time we chat let's start examining each of the four lines in a team. We'll start with the first line . . . the goalie.

ALL TOO OFTEN SPORTSWRITERS, NEO-SOCCER WRITERS, fall into the trap of billing any number of soccer players as "the successor to Pele." No one can be Pele's successor in the same way that Joe Louis, Babe Ruth or Jerry West can have successors. Franz Beckenbauer, a world-cupper for West Germany and now a member of the Cosmos, has already been labeled as Pele's successor by the press. There will never be another successor to Pele or Beckenbower, nor Ruth nor Gehrig, nor Louis or Clay, nor DaVinci or Michelangelo, nor . . .

THE AZTECS WERE AS COOL JULY FOURTH as they were hot July 2. Playing rarefied soccer against the star-laden (minus Beckenbauer) Cosmos Saturday the Western leaders couldn't find the ball when the USA's 201st birthday was celebrated Monday.

Result: Toronto's defending NASL champs (without Eusebio and Suhnholz this season) took charge from the national anthems onward and there was never a doubt as to the outcome. The 2-0 score didn't tell the story. It was Toronto all the way.

The game was but a minute old when Slippery George Best threaded a pass through an impossible hole for the game's first thrill but after that the thrills came from Toronto's four ricochets off the upright and crossbar . . . mainly from the educated foot of the Canadian's Brazilian, Ivair Ferreira, who had a field day against the Aztec defense simply because he played wide and open and was unmarked most of the game.

The same couldn't be said of the Aztec forward line who hardly at any time had a winger on either side. It was the old English game of the long ball down the middle, and let it be said in defense of targetman Ron Davies (he happens to be the highest scoring Englishman yet active in the game), that Ron did a masterful job of "taking" the Toronto fouls and yet making a play out of the air game. Davies is an expert at head-spraying but the rest of the forwards did not match up to his game.

The Toronto club fields an almost-total lineup of Croatians and they were fully supported by the L.A. contingent of fellow-Croatians who though small in number let it be known loud and clear they were rooting if not against the Aztecs, surely for the Canadians.

It is comparative to the California Latins rooting for the visiting Latin teams as we often see in games here in the Southland. Nationality is a strong force in soccer due to the international scope of the game.

When the day comes that all of the nationalities come to games in Los Angeles, rather than confine themselves to ethnic attraction . . . that's the day U.S. soccer will take a giant step forward, and promotion should be in that direction. There is a massive soccer audience dangling in the air around Los Angeles. How to tap it? . . . that is the Shakespearean query.

We have been seeing a lot of referee Bob Mathewson lately and like all the other refs in the NASL he is refereeing with a European whistle . . . which is to say he considers it a bad game if it has to be stopped by the whistle. The consequence is what we see far too much of in NASL play, and that is the "play on" signal when a foulplay is plainly seen by the entire crowd. For our purpose, we would like to see the foul player singled out and punished so that good soccer will become the order of the day in this country.

Results

VFW 4, Post 30 3
DAV 6, Taco Rita 4
VFW 11, Post 30 6 (6 innings)

Highlights

DAV remained undefeated in the second half by downing Taco Rita 6-4, in a game highlighted by Alex Maldonado's home run. The Taco Rita slugger hit the circuit clout as leadoff man in the bottom of the first inning. The home run is the only one in league action this season. Taco Rita carried a 4-3 lead into the seventh inning, only to see four base hits by DAV lead to three runs for the final score of 6-4.

Stanley Conley drove in two runs with a two out single up the middle. Eric Northrup followed suit, driving in another run. DAV's winning pitcher, Shane Turner, then retired the side in order to ice the victory. A trio of DAV hurlers limited Taco Rita to five hits. Besides Maldonado's homer, Avelino Sanchez and Gary Bryant collected doubles. Bryant was two for three. Turner and Johnny Rodriguez each had two hits for DAV.

VFW took over second place with two wins over Post 30. Post 30 had a 3-1 lead in the seventh, needing only three outs for a win. VFW proceeded to load the bases with Ruben Parada's double, a walk, and Scott Andry's single, his third of the day. Ralph Valdez then lined a double to left center field, tying the score. Andry stole home on the second pitch to the next batter, in a squeeze play which nearly failed. Jeff Byrum was the winning pitcher, going the distance, and allowing only two hits and four walks. Byrum hurled five perfect innings, and allowed only five base runners in the game. Post 30 scored two in the second and one in the third to spoil a shutout bid. Arthur Ursua (single) and Robert Vincent (double) had the only safeties for Post 30.

VFW made it a sweep by coming back with an 11-6 win over Post 30 on Saturday. Scott Andry was the winning pitcher, with Ruben Parada coming in for three innings of relief for a save. VFW had some heavy lumber, collecting nine hits. Joey DeLeon raised his batting average to .429, hitting a double, a triple and a single in three at bats. DeLeon had two RBI's.

VFW catcher Ralph Valdez also had a big day at the plate, going two for four with three RBI's. Valdez once again threw out three base runners attempting to steal. Teammate David Busby was also two for four. VFW gave up only four hits, two of them of the infield variety by Post 30's Robert Vincent. Tommy Parada was one for one. Right fielder Peter Rosales of Post 30 made two outstanding defensive plays, robbing VFW of two additional hits.

HIGHLIGHTS

The Optimists bombarded Montclair Bronze pitching for 17 hits on their way to a 19-5 victory. Calvin Myers' homer was the big blow of the game but Robert Crosswhite (4 for 5), Mark Allen (3 for 4), Kenny Lopez (3 for 5), and Johnnie Arenas (3 for 5) supplied the bulk of the hitting.

Lloyd's came up with seven runs in the second inning and then held off Mr. Dryclean rallies in the third and fifth innings to win, 8 to 6. Jeff Harlow was 2 for 3 for Lloyd's, and Dave Gerson and Donnie Wallace each had a pair for Mr. Dryclean. League home run champion, Danny Lopez hit his 14th of the year.

Bumstead's amassed seven extra base hits in downing Pizza Palace, 15-5. The Bumstead's bombers were Bobby Valenzuela (3 for 3, including a double), Dennis Wren (2 for 3 with double and triple), Gabriel Perez (2 doubles), David Gessaman (double), and Cliff Delasantos (homer).

Bruce Allyn Plumbing received two-hit, shut-out pitching from Jeff Dahlstrom and Mike Valdez as they combined to strike-out 15. Ricky Rhinehart (triple), Timmy Alberico (double), and Valdez (2 for 3) led the Bruce Allyn offense.

In a wild, high-scoring affair, Montclair Bronze held off a late challenge by Lloyd's to win, 13-12. Marc Yoakum (3 for 3, including a homer) and Jason Shewalter (homer) led the Bronze hitting while Shewalter, Charles Medina, and Ray Williams were accumulating 13 strikeouts. Wayne Reasons and Jeff Harlow both had two hits in three at bats for Lloyd's.

The hot hitting of Danny Lopez (4 for 4) and clutch pitching of Donnie Wallace and Dave Gerson (12 strikeouts) led Mr. Dryclean to a 16-6 decision over Optimists. Calvin Myers' 3 for 3 performance was not enough offense for the Optimists.

The potent Bruce Allyn Plumbing offensive attack led by Gary Mastny (3 for 3), Jeff Dahlstrom (2 for 2), and Mike Valdez (6th homer) provided the margin as the plumbers edged Bumstead's, 4 to 2 to finish the season undefeated (21 wins-0 losses), thus becoming the first team in Montclair Central's 20-year history to go through an entire season undefeated.

Gallery does comedy hit

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

Everybody loves Nedra.

Gallery Theater in Ontario turned the inimitable Nedra Volz loose on John Patrick's comedy, "Everybody Loves Opal," last weekend, and the mushroom-shaped actress gave all she had to a play that might have been written for her. ("That's the nice thing about being ugly," she chortles, "you don't worry about losing your looks.")

The comedy plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. for several weekends. Reservations can be made at 982-5357.

The plot — if that's the word — of the little farce centers around three people who connive to murder a garrulous but otherwise inoffensive rag-picker for her insurance money. At the risk of spoiling the play for you, I will say that the various attempts are all circumvented by luck and mismanagement, and the Mary Worth of the alley is convinced that her would-be assassins have saved her life. Or something like that.

Miss Volz, a local resident who has appeared in dozens of television shows (hilarious in Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman) and more TV commercials than she can count, is perky and irrepressible, a warm-hearted charmer who sees nothing but good in everyone, a senior citizen pixie. ("There are two things I've always wanted," she confides, "big bosoms and long eyelashes.")

Veteran actor Shaun Fesler is a rough, tough, sentimental Brad, competent and convincing as the heel with a soul. Debbie Hall's Gloria is a sweet, wistful, sexy, squawkie doll in the tradition of Billie Holliday. The third of the terrible triumvirate is John Gaglio as Solomon, giving his customary artful, I-ain't-acting characterization. Dick Reinhard provides a solid and amusing doctor, and Barry Nachos plays a young cop like a young cop.

BEN VEREEN, award-winning actor, singer and dancer, will perform at the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles tonight through Sunday.

'The Marriage of Figaro'

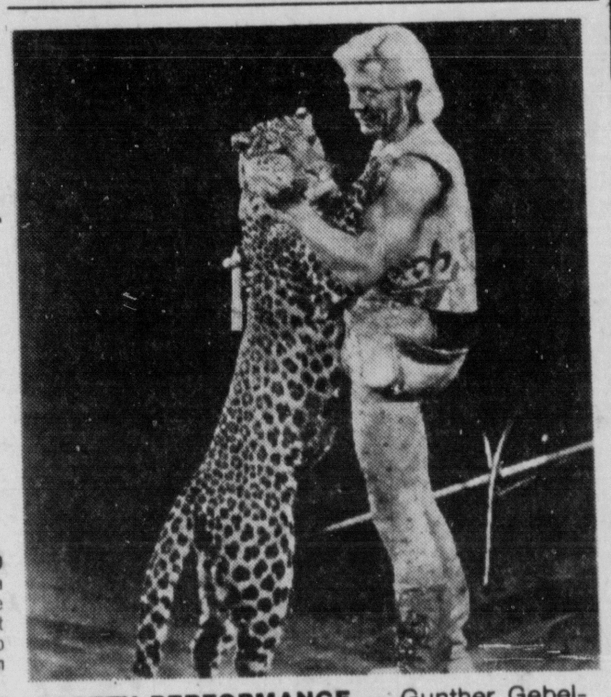
MSAC offers opera

The Summer Musical Theater of Cal State Northridge will give an open-air performance of Mozart's comic opera, "The Marriage of Figaro," at Mt. San Antonio College at 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

The opera, sung in English, will highlight the Hollywood Bowl Open House East season at MSAC. No advance reservations are necessary. Familes are invited to bring a picnic supper and listen to Opera Under the Stars at the stage area on the Art Center lawn. There is ample free parking in Lot B off Grand Avenue.

The new production, directed by David W. Scott, features the antics of Figaro, the valet, and Susanna, his fiance, and the amorous misadventures with their master and mistress including Jean Bartolo in the castle of Almaviva near Seville.

Starring in the production are Michael Booker, Figaro; Ann Gresham, Susanna; Jane Williams, Countess Almaviva; Frederik Schuetze, Count Almaviva and Timothy Foster, Basilio.



SPOTTY PERFORMANCE — Gunther Gebel-Williams, animal trainer for Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, will present the debut of his unique act involving leopards, panthers and pumas when the circus plays at the Forum in Inglewood July 19 through Aug. 3.

MGM reports income up 24 per cent

CULVER CITY, Calif. (BW) — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. (MGM) Tuesday (July 5) reported that net income for the third quarter ended May 31 increased 24 per cent to $7,449,000, or 52 cents a share, on operating revenues of $74,122,000.

For the three-month period ended May 31, 1976, MGM reported net income of $6,014,000, or 42 cents, on operating revenues of $61,342,000.

The company also announced that its board of directors will be meeting at 2 p.m. Tuesday to act upon the declaration of the company's regular quarterly cash dividend of 25 cents a share, at a meeting to be held on the grounds of its new hotel under construction in Reno, Nev. The board normally holds its quarterly meeting at 10 a.m. in the company's headquarters in Culver City, California.

For the first nine months of fiscal 1977, MGM net income rose 21 per cent to $21,159,000, or $1.49 a share, on operating revenues of $221,018,000.

For the first nine months of fiscal 1976, MGM's net income was $17,526,000, or $1.23, on operating revenues of $193,709,000.

Earnings per share give retroactive effect to the 9 per cent stock dividend paid in December 1976.

"We are extremely pleased by the increase in operating income and net income for the third quarter and the first nine months of fiscal 1977 as compared to the same periods last year," said Frank E. Rosenfelt, president and chief executive officer.

"The MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas continues to achieve new record levels of profitability. Operating income was $10,465,000 for the third quarter and $25,562,000 for the nine-month period ended May 31, 1977. The hotel's occupancy rate for the first nine months of 1977 was 92 per cent compared with 83 per cent in 1976."

In regard to feature film operations, Rosenfelt said, "Operating revenues in our feature film division were up significantly in the third quarter this year as compared to the same period a year ago and reflect the success of the theatrical release of 'Network.'

"The recent licensing of 'Network' to CBS-TV will represent an important contribution to income when reported in 1978. Operating reflecting the television licensing of 'Gone With the Wind.' However, an improvement is anticipated in the feature film division's fourth-quarter operating results in comparison with the same period in 1976.

"Our feature film division is now entering a period of increased activity with two pictures in post-production; one currently shooting; one picture to start production this month and another in the fall.

"In post-production is 'Telefon,' which stars Charles Bronson and Lee Remick. It will be released in the United States and Canada at Christmas 1977.

"Also scheduled for pre-release at Christmas in New York and Los Angeles is Neil Simon's 'The Goodbye Girl,' starring Richard Dreyfuss and Marsha Mason. The film is a co-production with Warner Bros. and will be distributed by that company worldwide.

"Now shooting at the MGM Studio is 'Coma,' starring Genevieve Bujold, Michael Douglas and Richard Widmark.

"Production is scheduled to begin on July 20 on 'Stingray,' starring Mark Hamill direct from his leading role in the hugely successful 'Star Wars.'

"A September start is anticipated on 'International Velvet,' the sequel to one of MGM's all-time favorites, 'National Velvet.'"

Commenting on the company's television division, Rosenfelt said, "We are gratified by the results of our television operations which are in a profit position for both the quarter and first nine months, reflecting a substantial turnaround, from last year.

"For the new television season, MGM-TV will be one of the leading producers of primetime programming. The company will be represented on three networks with a total of four series, and a new four-hour project for NBC-TV starring Andy Griffith.

"Series programming includes 'Logan's Run' on CBS; 'Chips,' a series about the California Highway Patrol on NBC; 'Lucan' on ABC; and 'How the West Was Won,' which will be presented in 10 two-hour episodes beginning in January on ABC.

"Features-for-TV include the already completed 'The Hostage Heart' and the currently filming 'The Comedy Company,' the latter starring Jack Albertson with a special appearance by George Burns, both for the CBS network.

"Construction on the MGM Grand Hotel-Reno is on schedule and the planned opening of what will be northern Nevada's largest resort hotel and casino complex will take place in May 1978.

"Following today's board meeting in Reno, our directors will have the opportunity to view the progress and scope of this exciting project as well as meet with community leaders who will be attending a party hosted by MGM on the construction site," Rosenfelt concluded.

NOSTALGIC SYMBOL — Murray Handwerker, president of Nathan's Inc., poses in New York in front of a circa 1922 illustration of the first Nathan's, a Coney Island hot dog stand. In its 61-year history, Nathan's has sold more than 500,000,000 hot dogs.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks drifted lower Thursday in moderate trading as investors waited for the Federal Reserve Board to report later in the day on the nation's money supply.

A sharp $1.5 billion surge reported by the Fed last week produced fears on Wall Street the board might tighten credit again. Shorterm term money rates have risen.

At the same time, however, some investors were buying in anticipation that the the government's Wholesale Price Index report due Friday would show a decline. W. Michael Blumenthal, Treasury secretary, predicted the inflation rate would drop to 6 per cent by early next year and unemployment would dip below 6 per cent.

Against that background, the Dow Jones industrial average was off 0.76 point to 906.97 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched avereage fell 5.86 points Wednesday.

Traders have shown considerabltrial average was off 0.76 point to 906.97 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched avereage fell 5.86 points Wedncond half.

Market breadth figures reflected the concern and investor uncertainty. Of the 1,633 issues crossing the tape, 576 declined, 492 advanced and 565 remained unchanged.

Volume at the two-hour market amounted to about 8,700,000 shares, compared with 9,030,000 traded during the same period Wednesday.

British Petroleum was the most active NYSE issue, unchanged at 16⅛ in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares at 16⅛. Trans Union was second, up ½ to 38½. Tandy Corp. was third, unchanged at 27¾.

Cummins Engine was off 1½ following a New York Times report about insider trading in the company's stock.

National Semiconductor, which gained a point Wednesday, was ahead another ¾ in active trading. The firm's lower fourth quarter earnings weren't as bad as some analysts had predicted.

Sea Containers was ahead ⅞ and Xtra Corp. ¾ on the Big Board and Interpool ⅞ on the American Stock Exchange. The Wall Street Journal said analysts expect container-leasing concerns to increase profits as demand grows.

Centronics Data Computer, which gained 1¼ Wednesday, was ahead ⅞. The firm has proposed a five-for-four stock split and declared a 25-cent dividend on the new shares.

Kroger was ahead ⅞ and Sears, Roebuck was up ⅝. The firms reported higher June sales.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. AVX Corp. was ahead ¾ after predicting its second quarter earnings would be up 30 per cent.

Garden State Paper announces changes

Garden State Paper Co., which operates recycled paper mills in Pomona and Garfield, N. J., has announced management of the operations are being split into separate, independent "regional profit centers."

Each will be responsible for its own operations, including production, sales and raw material procurement.

A company spokesman said the move will make each more sensitive to local regional needs.

Officials also announced relocation of the corporate offices from Saddle Brook, N. J. to Richmond, Va., headquarters of its parent company, Media General Inc.

Golden Gate's grim lure: suicides average one a week

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) — It's the favorite jumping off spot in the world, more magnetic than the Empire State Building, more dramatic than the Eiffel Tower.

The known people who have leaped now number in the 600s . . . and counting. Another numeral is added virtually every week.

You read about them now in obscure little paragraphs at the end of the obituary notices in the San Francisco newspapers. When the figure reaches 700, which by current calculation should be some time in 1980, it will be a front page story again — just as it was when Sharon Ungewitter, 24, an unemployed medical laboratory technician, plummeted to her death on Saturday, May 29. She was victim No. 600.

It was the day after the 40th anniversary of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge, which spans the straits between the peninsula of San Francisco and the headlands of Marin County.

Such attention to the morbidity of the bridge as a suicide site could be media overkill. After all, in San Francisco, which has the highest suicide rate in the nation, at 29.1 deaths per 100,000 population (the national rate is 12.6 and the California state rate is 18.3), only three per cent of the people who kill themselves use the Golden Gate bridge as their death instrument. But it's by far the most publicized suicide site in the world.

"The bridge has an aesthetic, symbolic appeal," says Dr. Jerome Motto of the University of California medical school. "It's the simple, stylish way to go."

"It's a dramatic, romantic image," says Abbey Goodman of San Francisco Suicide Prevention, Inc., "unlike an overdose of drugs alone in a squalid bed."

The high incidence of suicide in San Francisco is attributable to four factors: a transient population, the highest alcohol consumption in the nation, wide drug abuse and a generally older age group of residents.

"I think the fact that the bridge is considered the greatest suicide attraction in the city has a lot to do with why people choose it," continues Goodman. "But actually it's a myth. Barbiturates and alcohol are the leading attractions."

Yet the Golden Gate span remains the magnet of interest in this area and a focal point for studies by such scientists as Richard Seiden, a psychologist in the University of California - Berkeley Department of Public Health, who has published several papers on bridge suicides, and Dr. David Rosen of the Langley-Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute, who has interviewed six of the 10 known survivors of bridge leaps.

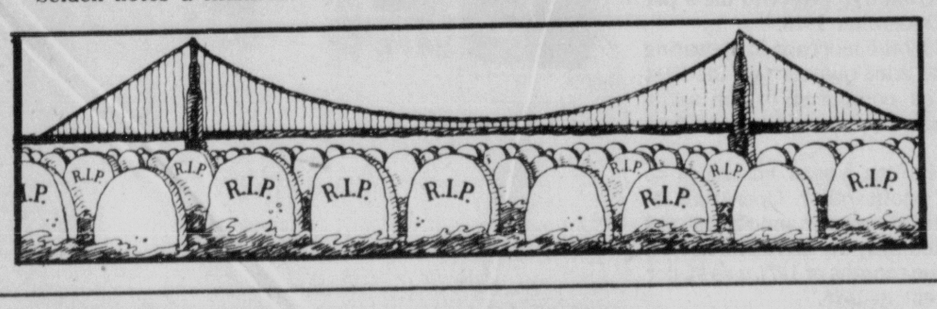
Seiden notes a manifest trend toward younger suicides, with the median age of bridge jumpers going from the 50s in the earlier years to below 30. "Suicide," he says, "is usually the result of a temporary crisis which lasts a few hours to a day. It is the permanent solution to a temporary problem."

Rosen, who would like to see a barrier erected to prevent would-be suicides from scaling the three-and-a-half-foot railing to dive into the waters below, notes that fewer than five per cent of people prevented from suicide ever try it again.

"What the known survivors of bridge jumps told us runs counter to what most people think about that kind of suicide," he says. "Their lives did not flash in front of their eyes. All but two blacked out before they hit the water. None remember the impact. Of the six we interviewed, two later attempted other forms of suicide. Both attempts were half-hearted and unsuccessful."

Tom Tawzer was just 16 years old when he stepped off the bridge at mid-span and fell 233 feet to the icy, salty water below. "The hardest thing was stepping over the rail," he said later. "Once I pushed off, it was different. I really remember the air. I was flying. The wind lifted my arms up over my head. It was a free feeling."

The leap takes just three seconds, generating a speed of 80 miles per hour when the victim hits the water, which is almost like a concrete pad at collision.



The men and women who have made the drastic plunge — authorities estimate that the number of deaths is probably a couple of hundred more than reported because the official count includes only recovered bodies — have little in common. They can be the sons of the famous or near-famous, like Marc Salinger, 28, whose father Pierre was President John F. Kennedy's press secretary. They are mostly obscure, starting with Harold Wobber, who was the first to choose the bridge for suicide in August, 1937, just 73 days after it opened.

He was walking across with a friend on silvery, scenic day, with the island of Alcatraz and the pastels of the city shimmering before them, when he suddenly said, "This is where I get off." And hurdled the rail to his death.

The youngest suicide was 15, the oldest 87. One was a real estate agent who had just closed a $25 million deal; many were flat broke. They have included criminals and attorneys, mechanics and writers, housewives and students, and even a pastor.

"People choose a bridge to end their lives because it is a quick, clean way for them to die," says Dr. Klaus Berblinger, a psychiatrist at the University of California medical center. "It's a dramatic way to scream out one's problems to the world and at the same time lose one's self in anonymity. The drop into the Bay, you see, is a plunge into an amorphous, encircling mass — and the body is usually recovered quickly, and intact."

For every one who jumps, though, four are stopped by alert preventative measures. Closed circuit television cameras scan the walkways on both the east and west sides (all the suicides occur on the east side facing Alcatraz and the city). Suicide squads employed by the bridge patrol 24 hours daily for cars that stop in mid-span.

The idea of a barricade to thwart suicidal attempts is still debated. The cost would be $2 or $3 million for a governing authority already strapped with mounting costs of operation. Since the Golden Gate bridge remains a prime tourist attraction and is used extensively for strolling, there are aesthetic objections as well. Executive director Carney Campion of the Golden Gate bridge states, "If we could stop them here, they would only go somewhere else."

Dr. Rosen disagrees. "The people we studied chose the Golden Gate bridge," he says, "because it is there. None of them had the means or imagination to kill themselves any other way then by jumping. It was the bridge or nothing."

A study at the University of California emphasizes the phenomenon of "suicide epidemic" — how a particular place can gain a reputation for suicides so much that it can cause these deaths.

In its first 16 years the Empire State Building was the scene of 16 death leaps. Since a barrier was installed on the observation deck in 1947, there have been no suicides.

"FONZIE" —
The Curse That Plagues Henry Winkler

The Fonz is inescapable; his face is on everything from T-shirts to lunch pails. Who — and what — is The Fonz? For Henry Winkler it is a monster; for the general public it's television's big hit Happy Days. Winkler, who trained at Yale University's drama school, finds that he is trapped in Fonzie's skin — and wants desperately to get out. He doesn't talk or act like The Fonz and is an articulate and soft-spoken man who is ambitious for a movie career. Now he hopes his new movie, Heroes, with Sally Field, will liberate him forever from the leather-look of the nevertheless delightful Fonzie.

THE GREAT ANCESTOR HUNT

Since Roots, the book, and Roots, the television smash hit, millions of Americans are rushing to discover their own origins. Genealogy has suddenly become the third-ranking hobby in the United States. A recent Gallup poll indicates that 69 percent of us are eager to know more about our ancestors. Harriet Van Horne, the well-known columnist, describing the craze for FAMILY WEEKLY, says that our libraries, town halls — even cemeteries — are being besieged by the new "explorers." Is this quest for roots merely a fad? Sociologists say no. Our lifestyle has bred a hunger to know who we are and where we came from, especially because we are a nation of movers, marrying and divorcing and obscuring the tracks we leave behind us.

FUNNY BUSINESS — By Roger Bollen

Santa Cruz salamanders

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Sally is protected now.

Sally is a nickname for the endangered Santa Cruz longtoed salamander. The creature occupies only two spots in the world, Ellicott Pond and Valencia Lagoon, both in Santa Cruz County. The total population is about 10,000.

To protect her, the county board of supervisors has adopted an "SP" (salamander protection) district in which any construction must take into account the habits of the shy, slow-moving salamander. In such a district, all new curbs and gutters must be rounded; building sites must be made passable for salamanders; grading of Sally's habitat vegetation must be kept to a minimum and continous retaining walls longer than 100 feet must have gently sloped ramps for them.

must be joking when they learn of the requirements," said Robin Felburg, an associate planners for the county. "They tell us we are putting salamanders before people, but we felt we could preserve the salamander's habitat without unusual restrictions."

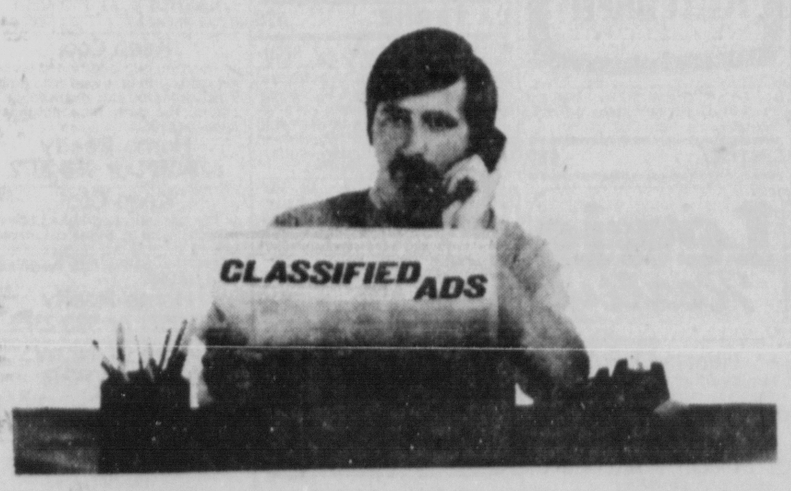
THE CINCH CONNECTION



"Selling's a Cinch in the Want Ads"

You've heard a sure thing described as a "lead pipe cinch". That's how newspaper readers feel about results they obtain from the Want Ads.

When you pick up the phone and dial our Classified department to sell your still valuable but not now used items, it's a cinch you are going to find buyers. Very often the articles will be sold on the first call. That's because people look to the Want Ads for good bargains in furniture, appliances, toys, bikes and trikes, sewing machines and musical instruments.

Realtors, automotive dealers and Business Services specialists find Classified a cinch when it comes to selling their goods and expertise.

Get in on a sure thing, whether you are buying or selling. Use the Want Ads.
